HEARING BEGINS TOMORROW

Leopold-Loeb Case to Be Aired Before Judge Caverly.

EVIDENCE TO BE PRESENTED

Slayers of the Franks Boy Plead Guilty to Murder Charge in Open Court—Testimony of Alienists to Be Introduced to Show the Court the "Degree of Responsibility" of the Defendants.

Chicago, July 22.—Hearing of evidence in the case of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, slayers of Robert Franks, 14-year-old schoolboy, will begin tomorrow before Judge Caverly.

Both youths pleaded guilty yesterday to the murder of the Franks boy. The action came as a surprise to the crowd in the courtroom. The prosecution immediately demanded the death penalty. Clarence Darrow, dean of criminal attorneys, entered the first plea for the prisoners.

State's Attorney Crowe, taken entirely by surprise at the plea of guilty, made no attempt to contest the action, but announced that he would call every state's witness to the stand, "so that the court may hear all the evidence in this case." "We will not allow the defense to shut out any evidence by pleading guilty," Crowe said. "These boys, both of them sane and entirely responsible, have committed the direst murder in the history of Chicago. They have come into open court and publicly entered their plea confessing that they kidnapped and murdered an innocent child. The state has a thorough case against these boys. They must hang. Nothing else must be permitted."

Darrow, in his argument, declared no attempt would be made to set the defendants at liberty. "These boys, your honor, have proven themselves unfit to mingle in society. They must not be set free and no attempt toward that end will be made."

Young Leopold was first called to the bench and himself pleaded guilty. Loeb followed him and did likewise. "Is it your understanding that if you plead guilty to murder in this court, the court may sentence you to death or to the penitentiary for the period of your natural life, or for a period of not less than 14 years?" Judge Caverly asked. Both replied they understood.

Darrow advised the court that before the boys are sentenced he wished to present evidence to the court. Benjamin Bachrach, aiding Darrow, announced that the defense wished to introduce testimony of certain alienists, who have examined Leopold and Loeb in order to show the court "the degree of responsibility" of the defendants.

Believing the defense was attempting to prove the boys insane, Crowe broke in, shouting: "Just a minute, your honor. If the defense in this case is trying to show that these boys are insane, how can they come into this court and legally plead guilty? If there is any question as to the sanity of these boys, the state's attorney demands that a jury of 12 men be selected, so that the state can prove beyond all shadow of a doubt that Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb are sane—that they are guilty of murdering Robert Franks—and that they must hang."

Attorney Bachrach said: "We desire to submit to the court the real evidence in this case, allowing the court to sentence these boys as the court sees fit, understanding, of course, that the court may sentence them to death."

The hearing of evidence will be before Judge Caverly and without a jury.

Sheriff Hoffman announced that extra guards had been assigned to the cells of Leopold and Loeb to preclude any attempt at suicide by the youths.

Paymaster Robbed.

Pittsburgh, July 22.—B. T. P. Tauss, manager of the General Cigar company at Bethlehem, Pa., was robbed by two bandits of the semi-monthly payroll, amounting to $17,000. Tauss, accompanied by an employee, had driven in his automobile several blocks from a bank when two strangers with drawn revolvers stepped on the running board and ordered him to drive outside of town, where another car was awaiting the bandits. The money was transferred into another satchel, after which the robbers drove away.

FIVE CHILDREN PERISH

Fire Destroys the Farm Home of Their Parents.

Mercer, Pa., July 22.—Five children burned to death in a fire at their parents' farm home near here. They were children of Fred Hegelin and wife—Lafayette, 9; Lee, 8; Enid, 5; Clyde, 3, and Fred, 9 months. The bodies of the little victims were found in the ruins huddled in a corner where they crept as the flames and smoke of the burning home drove them from the windows. The fire broke out on the ground floor while the parents were completing their chores about the barn and garden. Mrs. Hegelin, when she detected the flames, saw it was impossible to save the children from the stairway. She pleaded with them to leap, but they were too frightened to hear her cries.

MANY SUSPECTS ROUNDED UP

Persian Government Seeking Slayers of Imbrie.

AMERICAN MINISTER REPORTS

Death of American Vice Consul at Teheran Said to Have Been Caused by a Sabre Wound in the Head. Mob's Attack Incited by Religious Agitators, It Is Said—Diplomatic Corps at Teheran Aroused.

Washington, July 22.—American Minister Joseph Kornfeld cabled the state department from Teheran, Persia that 200 persons have been arrested in connection with the murder of Robert W. Imbrie, American consul, who was attacked by a mob in the Persian capital.

Among the suspects rounded up is Thakoor Zedeh, leader of a religious sect in Persia.

The entire Persian press is filled with denunciation of the murder "at a time when the cordial relations between Persia and the United States are unrivaled," Kornfeld reported.

The Persian legation here announced that its charge d'affaires had made the following verbal statement of regret to Acting Secretary of State Crow: "The Persian government desires to express its utmost regret over the unfortunate murder of Vice Consul Imbrie and the Persian government assures the United States government that it will do everything in its power to fulfill its duty in this hour of distress to apprehend the slayers of Major Imbrie."

A Teheran dispatch states that the vice consul's death was caused by a sabre wound in the head. The situation is considered serious, the dispatch says, because sabers are carried only by the police.

The diplomatic corps at Teheran has sent an energetic note to the Persian government calling attention to the fact that the government's failure to prevent the attack has caused considerable apprehension among foreign residents.

As investigation of the attack continues, it is evident the mob was incited by religious agitators. Imbrie fought vigorously with his heavy cane, knocking down several of the Persians until he finally was felled by a blow from a military sword. The American tried to rise, but was knocked down with a stone and his jaw broken. The crowd, evidently thinking both Imbrie and his companion, Seymour, dead, then retreated and police, who had remained in the background, took the Americans to a hospital.

Word went around that the Americans were still alive and the mob formed again, breaking in doors and windows of the hospital and attacking the two men again. Imbrie apparently already was dead, but his body was beaten. Seymour was dragged through the corridors and left for dead. His condition is serious.

The state department announced that the United States has asked the Persian government for a "precise statement" regarding the responsibility for the killing of Imbrie.

HUGHES SPEAKS

Criticises Growing Volume of Law in the United States.

London, July 22.—Secretary of State Hughes, in an address to members of the bar at Westminster hall here, predicted that efforts to "undermine" the authority of the supreme court of the United States will fail. He criticized the growing volume of law in the United States, saying: "The commonwealths in our union of states, each sovereign within its sphere, are producing laws at a rate which has filled us with anxiety lest no one should be able to know the law. The fertility of the legislative soil is our despair. Our lady of the common law has had an embarrassing progeny. Courts are pouring out decisions in such numbers that only the makers of encyclopedias can keep track of them."

Gasoline Price Slashed.

Piqua, O., July 22.—The Meteor Motor company of Piqua cut the price of gasoline from 21 cents to 16 cents a gallon. Officials of the company declared they could make a fair profit at the new price by purchasing gasoline direct from the refinery in Okmulgee, Okla., in carload lots.

Former Judge Dead.

Akron, O., July 22.—William J. Ahern, Jr., 38, former judge of common pleas court, is dead. He suffered a nervous breakdown about a year ago.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Safety Director Dismissed.

Newark, O., July 22.—W. H. N. Stevens, Republican mayor of Newark, discharged Service Director Charles F. Taylor. The latter was appointed by Stevens when he took office last Jan. 1. According to Taylor, he was discharged because of a "rumpus" in the ranks of the Licking county klan organization. Several weeks ago Taylor and others in Stevens' city cabinet threatened to file charges against the mayor, seeking his removal. The threat was never carried out.

B. & L. Men Meet.

Cleveland, July 22.—Two thousand building and loan officials from 45 states attended the opening session of the thirty-second annual meeting of the United States League of Local Building and Loan associations. The report of the secretary of the association shows that the building and loan associations of the United States now have assets in excess of $4,000,000,000 and that they are serving more than 7,500,000 people.

Village Owes State.

Columbus, July 22.—The village of Glouster owes the state $3,357.87 as the state's share of fines collected for violation of the Crabbe act, according to a report filed by state examiners with Joseph T. Tracy, state auditor. The village owes an additional $156.70 to Athens county for fines in state cases. Findings were returned in favor of the village for $3,650.30.

Demand Jury Trial.

Zanesville, O., July 22.—Motion picture theater owners, arrested for keeping their theaters open Sunday, pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial. This motion will be decided by Municipal Judge Isaac Humphrey this week. The men also requested that the court compel filing cost bonds of $200 in each case in the event the prosecution loses.

Claim Against Directors.

Dayton, O., July 24.—John A. Best, receiver of the Springfield National bank at Springfield, was authorized by Federal Judge John E. Sater to compound a claim of $100,000 against former directors of that bank, in winding up the affairs of the institution.

Urbaytis at Toledo.

Toledo, July 22.—Joe Urbaytis, Toledo postoffice robber, is in the county jail here. He arrived under heavy guard from Columbus, where he had been receiving treatment since May 5, when he was shot by a detective while resisting arrest in that city.

River Man Drowns.

Marietta, O., July 22.—Andrew C. Rowe, 52, caretaker at Ohio river dam No. 18, was drowned while attempting to rescue Dexter Beyer, 40, who fell into the river while working on a dredge boat. The latter was saved by J. E. Ruble, 60, lock engineer.

Hog Prices Soaring.

Cleveland, July 22.—The $9 hog arrived at the Cleveland Union stockyards, replacing the $7.75 porker of last week. Packers announced a general rise in the price of all cuts of fresh pork and advanced rates on some brands of cured.

Senator Walsh Retires.

Washington, July 22.—Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts announced his retirement as chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee. He will be succeeded by Senator Jones of New Mexico. Walsh said he was following the precedent that the position should be held only through one congressional election. The committee's work is largely advisory and cooperative with the Democratic national committee.

CAMPAIGN PLANS MADE KNOWN

Republicans to Conduct a Nationwide Drive for Votes.

AGAINST SECTIONAL CRUSADES

Chairman Butler Announces Program After Conferences at the Capital. Says There Is No Lack of Confidence Among Republicans—Representative Hicks to Manage Eastern Headquarters.

Washington, July 22.—William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican National committee, issued a statement declaring it is the plan of Republican leaders to conduct a nationwide rather than sectional campaign in behalf of Coolidge and Dawes. Mr. Butler said:

"We do not propose to seek support in one section of the country through concentrated and obvious effort and to try to gain it in another section by silence and evasion of issues. The suggestion that the campaign must be centered here or there to assure success or that we must bombard any particular state or group of states, can come only from political parties or candidates that lack national appeal and viewpoint."

Representative F. C. Hicks of New York will be placed in charge of the eastern headquarters, which were opened by Butler last week in New York. Hicks before leaving Washington was in conference at the white house. Mr. Butler will leave tomorrow for Chicago to look after the affairs at the main headquarters there and to confer with Charles G. Dawes regarding his participation in the campaign. Dawes is expected to bear the brunt of the campaign so far as speaking is concerned. It is said to be the intention of the campaign managers to have President Coolidge deliver eight or 10 speeches during the campaign.

Discussing Republican prospects, Mr. Butler said: "July forecasting is hardly an achievement. I will say, though, that judging from the character of the letters, telegrams and messages which I have received, as well as interviews which I had in Chicago and in New York, there is no lack of confidence among the Republicans of the country. I have been particularly pleased in receiving a large number of communications from men and women who admit that their interest in past campaigns has only been incidental, but who are now anxious to participate in the present campaign."

REBELS STILL HOLD CITY OF SAO PAULO

Build Up Strong Organization Around State Army.

Buenos Ayres, July 22.—Brazilian rebels still control the greater portion of the state of Sao Paulo.

In the city of Sao Paulo there is a severe food shortage and price regulation had been started. The rebels also had requisitioned considerable food supplies from the interior, beans, cattle, rice and milk.

According to rebel sources, 600 were killed in the street fighting, which preceded expulsion of federal forces from Sao Paulo city. The Sao Paulo rebels have collected a war fund of 62,000 contos of reis (more than $6,000,000), according to other advisers.

Travelers reaching here from Sao Paulo report that discipline in the rebel ranks was excellent and that a formidable military organization had been built up around the state army. The rebel troops seemed well supplied with ammunition and had taken control of several factories which were turning out additional equipment. Guards were posted over banks and business houses.

The general advance of the federal forces, scheduled to take place Saturday, apparently was not attempted.

Costly Blaze.

Cleveland, July 22.—A fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, did $125,000 damage to the Kinsman Builders' Supply company and for a time threatened the southeast district of the city.

BRICK PLANT INVOLVED

Tracy Likely to Refuse to Honor Harper's Warrant.

Columbus, July 22.—Legal action may be taken to prevent the purchase by the state of the Roseville (Muskingum county) brick plant at a price of $35,000. It was considered possible that State Auditor Tracy may refuse to honor Director Harper's warrant, on the ground that the amount paid is excessive, as charged by Republican state headquarters. Unless Auditor Tracy disallows the warrant, mandamus or injunction proceedings are likely.

The brick plant purchase has been the subject of controversy since last week, when Republican state headquarters charged that the $35,000 purchase price paid by the state is $17,000 more than it could have been bought for a year ago. Director Harper denied the charge and said the plant was exactly what the state needed and was a bargain at the price.

LaFollette Campaign Committee.

Washington, July 22.—The LaFollette campaign committee will have Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin as its chairman, with headquarters in Chicago, where he now is directing campaign activities. Five members will be selected by Senators La Follette and Wheeler and the others will represent the conference for progressive political action, which endorsed the candidacies of both. The finance committee will be made up of two sections—one representing La Follette and Wheeler, the other the conference.

FIRPO DETAINED

Woman Companion Also Held on Their Arrival in New York.

New York, July 22.—Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, who arrived here for a match with Harry Wills, was taken to Ellis Island on a technical charge that his passport was improperly issued. With the boxer was taken Senorita Blanca Lourdes, who occupied a stateroom adjoining Firpo's during the voyage from Buenos Ayres. Her passport was for Havana, where the vessel did not touch, and she and Firpo were detained upon her attempt to leave the liner with him. The senorita told officials she was Firpo's secretary, but, under questioning, demonstrated complete ignorance of shorthand, stenography or typing.

Fifty-seven Drowned.

Tokio, July 22.—It was announced here that 57 persons were drowned when the Nippon Yusen Kaisha freighter Matsuyama Maru foundered off Goto island, near Kyushu July 11. The freighter was an old vessel with no radio and carried no passengers. The last port made by the vessel was Keelung, Formosa, from which it sailed for Yokohama July 9.

Charged With Forgery.

Cleveland, July 22.—Mrs. Blanche Chamberlain, 31, of Chippewa Lake, charged with having given a forged check for $3,000 as payment for options on real estate valued at $100,000, waived the preliminary examination that had been set for Wednesday and was bound over to the county grand jury by Police Judge Terrell.

JOHNNY WAS A HOME-MAKER

By BENTON GREY

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"YOUR baby's come, Mr. Johnson," announced the postmaster, as the young settler halted his team in front of the post office at Alliance, Miss. "Just wait a minute and I'll bring him out to you." He disappeared within the door that led to his parlor, and presently emerged again, accompanied by his wife and a little boy of some three years, who smiled up confidently into Johnson's face.

"Never knew you was a married man, Mr. Johnson," continued the postmaster sympathetically. "He seems to have made a sure enough long journey across the water all by himself. My wife says she'd be scared to death to send our Ella that distance by post. The mother ain't dead, I hope?"

"My baby," Johnson yelled. "I'm a single man, Mr. Smith. How can it be my baby?"

The postmaster shook his head dubiously.

"He's tagged," he said, "and there's postmarks from most all the places he's passed through. 'C. Johnson, Alliance, Miss.' it reads. This is Alliance, and this is Mississippi, and you're sure enough C. Johnson, aren't you?"

"It's a mistake," groaned Johnson. "I never even dreamed of having a baby."

"Of course, Mrs. Smith will take charge of him for a while, if the sender can be found," said Ed Smith, gloomily. "But, having nine of our own, you'll understand that it would be kind of hard on us to keep him."

"You keep him for a few days until something more is heard about him," said Johnson. "Can't you have the sender traced?"

"I'll do my best," said Mr. Smith, and Johnson rode away.

That night the loneliness of his situation appealed to him more than ever before. He had almost forgotten the faithless young woman who had been the cause of his migration to this half-settled and almost uninhabited region. He had the normal human need of companionship—yet he had no one to call his, neither wife nor parents nor family. He surprised Mr. Smith by appearing at the post office again the next morning.

"I think I'll relieve you of the boy for a few days," he said. "It might be companionable—and then, when you get word of the sender we can have him shipped back again."

He did not return for several days, and when he did appear at the post office, Mr. Smith was amazed to hear the child calling him daddy.

"Well, you see," explained Johnson, sheepishly, "I came to the conclusion that I was a sort of selfish cross, living all alone, and I might as well do a little good in the world. So Johnny and I have sort of struck up a partnership. He's going to run the home and I'm going to run the farm, aren't we, Johnny?"

"Yeth, daddy," said Johnny, clinging to his new father's coat.

Ed Smith turned to his wife when the cart had rolled away.

"It hate to think of Mr. Johnson's feelings when the real father turns up," he said.

"Perhaps he won't turn up," answered his wife. "Do you suppose—"

"No, no, my dear; it isn't his," her husband answered. "But it's a mighty queer situation."

The problem was solved a few days later by the arrival at the postmaster's office of a pretty and highly excited young woman, who inquired breathlessly for the boy.

"I got word at Alliance, Ark., she explained. "My dead sister's boy, sent from Scotland. She was my only relative. You have him here?"

"Well, not here," the postmaster admitted, rubbing his chin reflectively. "Might your name be Johnson, Miss?"

"Yes, Clarice Johnson."

"Well, it's odd; but the boy was addressed to C. Johnson—that stands for Charles; and as there's only one C. Johnson around here, I gave him to him."

"Then you must take him away at once," answered Miss Johnson.

"Well, I'll try," the postmaster said. "But Mr. Johnson kinder took a hankering after him."

"But he can't have him," cried the young woman, indignantly. "How can a stranger take a child away from his aunt?"

"He can't," admitted Mr. Smith. "Only he's sort of done it. However, you wait here, miss, and I'll get Mr. Johnson down by telephone inside of a couple of hours."

Two hours later Johnson, looking very uncomfortable, arrived with the boy. But Johnny absolutely refused to go with his new-found relative.

"I guess you'd better spend a day or two here, miss," suggested Mrs. Smith. "Then he'll grow sort of used to you, and it won't be so hard on them."

She accepted Mrs. Smith's hospitality. And soon the situation was self-evident. The child had evidently destroyed the original tag, and in re-writing it, the prefix Miss had somehow got placed at the end, where it read Mississippi.

But Johnny proved so reluctant to leave his new-found father that, long before the "day or two" was up, Johnson, having ascertained that Miss Johnson had no ties at Alliance, Ark., made a proposition embracing—

But what other sort of proposition would one expect at a town named Alliance?

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

THE little shops which line the streets in Florence have marvelously attractive displays. The Italian has an eye for color and proportion and he uses all his skill in the arrangement of his goods. One enters the shop with interest and enthusiasm only to find that it is a case of few, if any bananas. The little dinky showcase in the dark interior is almost empty. Every thing is in the window. There is little or no stock in reserve. You go out a little disappointed; you had expected much and found little.

It pays to advertise, and many public and professional men go into it extensively. Hughes was one of these. He had a fine front and an impressive manner. He never went out of town without a detailed mention in the local paper. He never did anything or said anything or contemplated doing or saying anything that did not receive double-headed attention from the press.

"Our distinguished citizen, the Hon. W. J. Hughes," etc. You know, the rest. He may have bought a baby buggy or had a tooth pulled, but he believed in advertising. The only trouble was that when you got inside his intellectual shop, the showcase was empty. His display was all in the window.

Bill Milliken was very different. He was shy and reticent in conversation and unaggressive in meeting people. His little dark office was reached by a rickety stairway which had seldom felt the touch of a broom. The sign that announced to the public "William Milliken, Attorney," was painted in black and could hardly be read. Bill's show window was very badly arranged. His advertisements were poorly written. But when you got into his establishment and talked to him a while, you found he had the goods—beautiful things which he could attractively display. The facts were that Bill knew more than any other lawyer in the county. Ten minutes of his advice was worth more than an hour of Hughes'. He simply didn't know how to advertise.

As I said it pays to advertise, and some men do too little of it, but if you do advertise, you ought to have the goods.

Beyond Shaw's Vision

A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it; it would be hell on earth.—George B. Shaw.

Homes for Aged

Accounts are not very definite concerning the establishment of the first home exclusively for the aged. In England in early days and in Germany at the end of the Seventeenth century there were hospitals to which the aged and infirm could go. Such a hospital was founded by St. Cross near Winchester, England, in 1136, and another, the Coningsby hospital at Hereford, was founded in 1614.

Future Possibility

Waste power now tumbling over Victoria falls, Africa, may be running machinery in New York and Chicago when the present plans for power transmission without wires are perfected.

Value of Forests

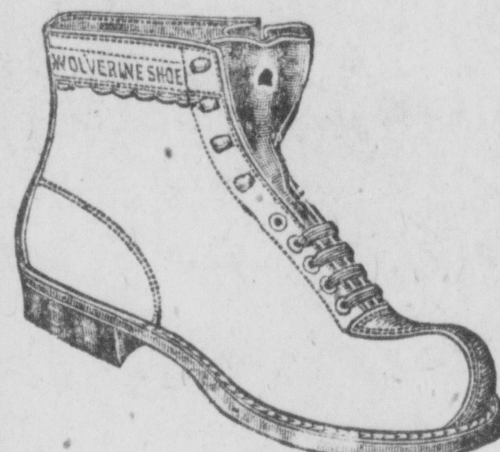

The Department of Agriculture says that removal of forests destroys the ground cover of leaf-mold, which once absorbed rain and snow waters, holding and distributing them to the soil. Cleared of forest and its spongy ground cover, the bare soil absorbs comparatively little water, most of which runs off rapidly, swelling streams and flooding and eroding the lower ground.

QUARTER-TONE PIANO INVENTED BY GERMAN

Fascinating Effect Produced by New Instrument, Say Musicians Who Have Heard It.

Berlin.—New fine points for jazz music will be made possible by the invention by Grotian Steinweg of Brunswick, Germany, of a quarter-tone piano which produces sounds described as a cross between the gliding airs of ukulele and a banjo and the exotic intervals of a Chinese string piano.

Two pianos, one of which is tuned to standard pitch and the other of which is tuned a quarter tone higher, are connected with a keyboard on which red and brown keys are inserted between the ordinary black and white keys. The playing of this new composite instrument is said to have a fascinating effect, according to persons who have heard concerts given by the inventor.

Alois Haba, composer of quarter-tone music, who has been at work on scores of this kind for some time, sees a far-reaching future in quarter-tone music and regards Herr Steinweg's invention as epoch-making.

Not only will the ear have to become accustomed to differentiating between intervals of only a quarter of a tone, but the whole technique of piano playing will be changed. Women with small hands will be eliminated as pianists since the new octave will require a greater hand span.

The entire mechanism of playing will also become greatly complicated since there will be one-third more keys.

Musical critics who have heard Herr Steinweg's instrument have reserved judgment on it. They appear to fear being classed as old-timers if they do not fall in with the modern tendency toward the unusual, yet at the same time they admit their ears are not yet educated up to the new invention.

Resigns at 84, After 62 Years as Teacher

Miss Nellie F. Cornell, aged eighty-four, has just resigned after a service of 62 years, in the public schools of Rochester, N. Y., the last 47 as a principal. The only break in the continuity of her service was two brief periods of illness in her first years of teaching. Among the pupils in her school at the time she resigned were many grandchildren of former pupils. Miss Cornell was born in Rochester October 10, 1840. Her mother was a pioneer school teacher and her father, Stephen Cornell, was a cousin of Ezra Cornell, founder of Cornell university.

Immigrants Take Up Pacific Waste Lands

Olympia, Wash.—Immigrants from eastern United States are steadily moving into the West and many of the counties of this state have received large deputations of Hollanders, Italians, Russians and Scandinavians this spring. They are welcomed, as the majority have funds enough to take up land and begin farming and other agricultural pursuits.

The Hollanders with several colonies of Swiss, have settled in the southwest section, where dairying predominates. Cheese-making is a growing industry and has attracted considerable capital from the immigrants who know the business.

On the logged-off lands pasture grasses grow abundantly and dairying is profitable from the start.

A majority of the Italians, with some Serbians, are skilled in fruit growing, and hundreds of young orchards have been set out among the stumps of southwestern Washington. Others have engaged in nut culture, planting filberts, walnuts and pecans. In the district near Winlock 80 newcomers built poultry plants, and more than 500,000 chicks have been imported for the nucleus of next year's laying flocks.

Priest Dies at 110

Guanajuato, Mexico.—Despite his advanced age, Father Jose Guadalupe Castorena continued serving his flock almost to the day of his death, which occurred after he had passed his one hundred and tenth birthday anniversary. He is believed to have been one of the oldest residents of Mexico whose birth record could be established beyond a doubt.

Meaning of "Cuba"

The meaning of the word "Cuba" is unknown. The island was known by that name among the natives when it was discovered in 1492 by Columbus. Several attempts were made by Columbus to have the island named after various members of the Spanish royal family, but they all failed.

Wind Spreads Seeds

The wind plays an important part in spreading the numerous down-covered seeds when the cotton plant is not systematically cultivated, says Nature Magazine. The rot penetrates deep into the soil. The plant responds readily to differences in climate, soil and method of growing.

Where Women Propose

It is the women who do the proposing in Dahomey. When a girl reaches the age of eighteen she is eligible for matrimony, and she at once sets out to find some one willing to marry her. Frequently she takes a husband on trial for a month or two before choosing him for better or worse.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

To Decide Fate of Bride.

Judge Henry Scarlett of the county courts, was called upon Tuesday morning to determine whether Katherine Fern Kleinbell will go to her father, Otey Kleinbell, 9899 Sunbury road, or to Casper Hilton, who married her on July 10, at Circleville. Katherine, according to her father, will not be 15 years old until next October and notwithstanding that fact was married to Hilton, who claims to be 24 years old but who is said by probation officers to be 32 years old. Both bride and bridegroom have filed habeas corpus proceedings, which will be heard by Judge Scarlett to secure possession of the bride.—Columbus Dispatch.

Eggs as Coins

Money is not the only form of currency existent, though it is the only form internationally recognized. HITLER LAND
AT AUCTION

Sale of 1635 Acres in Pickaway Plains Brought $209,788.49.

H. M. Crites Bought 943 15 Acres for $127,372.—Board of Education Gets 515 Acres for $57,761—177.37 Sold to S. T. Ruggles for $24,654.

What was the largest public land sale ever held in Pickaway county was that held at the court house Monday when 1635.52 acres of the Nelson Hitler estate were offered by the surviving executor, George Steely, and the amount of the sale was $209,788.49. These lands are in the famous Pickaway Plains and attracted a large number of bidders from various parts of the state.

Dresbach Brothers and C. G. Chalfin were the auctioneers and Charles H. May is the attorney for the executor.

The first, second, fourth and fifth tracts amounting in area to 943.15 was purchased by H. M. Crites for $127,372.30 as follows: First tract, 105 acres at $138 an acre, $14,490; second tract, 226.20 acres, at $135 an acre, $30,537; fourth tract, 301.75 acres at $130 an acre, $39,227.50; fifth tract 310.02 acres, at $139 an acre, $43,117.80. Third tract of 177.37 acres sold at $139 an acre and was purchased by S. T. Ruggles for $24,654.43. The sixth tract of 515.73 acres was sold for $112 an acre, total $57,761.76. This tract was purchased by Frank J. Bennett.

On the first and second tract purchased by Mr. Crites he assumed the payment of an annuity of $600 payable each year during the life of Amelia Ludwig, widow of Henry O. Ludwig, who formerly owned these two tracts.

The land was sold on the following terms: ten per cent down, forty per cent September 1, or when the deeds are delivered and the balance September 1, 1925.

The sale of last Monday amounting to $209,788.49 added to the previous sales of June 9 and June 30 which were as follows: June 9, tract of 199.42 acres sold to Clifton and Grace Reichelderfer for $22,833.59 and the timber tract of 95 acres, sold to the Prendergast company for $15,200, a total of $38,033.59. Of this amount Nelson Hitler's estate gets only two-thirds, the other third is owned by Miss Della Phillips. The Hitler estate gets only $25,355.73.

On June 30, a tract of land 162.52 acres was purchased by Marvin Steely for $13,790.41 and another tract of 186.24 acres was sold at the same time to Harvey W. Dresbach for $16,947.84. This sale totaled $35,738.25.

The grand total of the three sales is $270,882.40 and this amount less expenses goes to the trustee of the board of education of Pickaway township.

At the time of this sale, Mr. Crites was the largest landowner in the county, having about 4000 acres, and his purchase of 943.15 acres Monday makes his holdings now over 5000 acres.

AMUSEMENTS

A domestic melodrama of the finest a story of human strength and weakness is the Paramount picture, "His Children's Children," which opened at the Met theater last evening. The production, with Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Mackaill, James Rennie and George Fawcett in featured roles, is an adaptation by Monte M. Katterjohn of a new novel by Arthur Train and it was excellently produced by Sam Wood.

The story is one of a multi-millionaire railroad magnate who on his fifty fifth birthday anniversary comes to the decision, that he is going to "lay off." His three daughters, Diana, Sheila and Claudia, have become almost strangers in his household. Always on the go, Diana and Sheila, for Claudia has been unfortunate in her marriage with a scapegrace Englishman, find little, if any time to devote to household duties. They are ultra-modern young women with but one aim in life enjoyment, found thru the artificial channels of dope, Greenwich Village and the like. Peter B. Kayne, the old grandfather, is unable to restrain them.

Financial reverses revolutionize the Kayne household and it is then that the girls "come to." Diana in particular, becomes quite domesticated, happy in the love of Lloyd Maitland, played by James Rennie. Bebe Daniels portrays the role of Diana while Dorothy Mackaill is cast as the wayward Sheila. George Fawcett has the excellent character part of old Peter B. himself. Among the more prominent players in the supporting cast are Hale Hamilton, Mary Eaton, Mahlon Hamilton, Warner Oland, Lawrence D'Orsay and John Davidson. "His Children's Children" is an extremely powerful production and one that is sure to strike home anywhere. It is a delightful story of everyone's home and family and you'll enjoy it immensely.

NOT WORRIED

Four Republican Candidates Not Concerned About Primary.

Four Republican candidates for re-nomination next month for state offices are not at all worried about the result. They are Colonel Thad H. Brown, secretary of state, J. T. Tracy state auditor, C. C. Crabbe, attorney general and Harry S. Day, state treasurer. Those who would oppose any of these candidates for a second term are just realizing the effect of the recent Republican state convention resolution may have had upon their political aspirations. The convention delegates without a dissenting vote not only endorsed the present incumbents, but went further and pledged their support for another term for each and every one of them. Opposition to these candidates is virtually nil, and realizing this fact none of them so far have made any effort to organize or make any serious efforts for the nominations.

WILSON A. TOOTLE

Died at His Home in Ross County After Short Illness.

Wilson Asbury Tootle, a farmer of South Union township, Ross county, died at his home Sunday, July 20, at 1:30 o'clock after a two-months' illness with a complication of diseases. He was born in South Union township Ross county, August 10, 1846, and was the son of John and Mary Brown Tootle. His wife, Mrs. Mary C. Hoddy Tootle preceded him to the grave a number of years ago. Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Clarence Trego, seven grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Eleanor Layton, of North Union township.

Funeral services were held from Brown's chapel, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Stephenson officiated. Interment in Brown's chapel cemetery.

HAY FEVER

Ragweeds May be Prevented by Cultivation or Clover Seeding.

Hay fever, as defined in the July issue of "Hygenia" is a disease caused for the most part by irritation from plant pollens. Hay fever has three forms—the early spring, the early summer and the late summer or fall types, and the symptoms are essentially the same in each. The autumn form is by the most common, altho some people are susceptible to more than one variety.

Ragweeds, of which there are several species, most commonly cause this disease, at least in the eastern and northern United States, altho pollens from a great variety of plants are known to produce hay fever occasionally.

Uncultivated areas such as roadsides, vacant lots and fence corners are frequented by the undesirable ragweed. They flower from about the middle of August to the middle of October, unless killed earlier by frost. During the flowering season each normal plant produces billions of pollens.

More than 1,000,000 persons in the United States suffer annually from hay fever. Depending on the susceptibility of the patient and the proportion of pollen in the air, the attacks vary in severity from the symptoms of a mild cold to complete incapacitation.

Ragweeds may be prevented from growing by cultivation or by thick seeding with clover. Areas impractical for cultivation, such as roadsides and other waste places, should be mowed before the plants pollinate. Weeding is a humanitarian activity because it saves suffering, and health officers in cities should take care that the grass and weed ordinances are enforced.

Harvest of the Sea

Fish to the value of $50,000,000 are consumed annually by mankind. Of this amount Europe collects about half, the United States nearly one-third and the remaining one-sixth goes to the rest of the world. Translating this into weight, America uses about 2,500,000,000 pounds of fish a year, including shellfish.

Poets Draw the Line

Conscription in America

Conscription was not resorted to in the Revolutionary war. The first bill of this kind was introduced into an American congress by the conscription act of October 27, 1814, under the auspices of the then secretary of war, James Monroe. This was not carried out.

Avoid Injury in Harvesting Seed

Most Potato Growers Do Not Appreciate Importance of Proper Handling.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The average seed-potato grower does not fully appreciate the importance of using every means to prevent injury to the tubers from rough handling during the process of harvesting and storing, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Mechanical injuries to a tuber are sources for the entrance of infection which rapidly spreads to other tubers which come in contact with the injured one. If the crop is grown on land which contains many small stones the tubers are almost certain to be more severely injured than when grown in a sandy, loam soil. Hand digging is not always feasible, but it is believed that where small stones abound in the soil it will be desirable to harvest the home seed plot by hand. Much injury will be avoided if the seed stock designed for planting the field plot for the ensuing year is picked directly into crates in which it is allowed to remain throughout the storage period.

Proper Storage.

Storage conditions necessary to insure vigorous seed at planting time are more easily provided in the North than in the South. In the former region a well-constructed cellar, pit, or cave serves reasonably well. The main thing is to keep the room temperature sufficiently low to retard germination. The ideal seed tuber is one which has not wasted any of its stored-up energy by excessive loss through sprouting. It should be firm with the first sprouts just showing. Such tubers can be depended upon, if suitable conditions prevail, to start quickly when planted and to make a vigorous growth.

Plans for Seed.

The general practice among Southern growers of securing seed from the North involves, in the absence of suitable storage conditions, one of two things: Either getting the seed potatoes late in the fall and holding them over in dugouts, pits, or cellars, with consequent sprouting before planting, or the risk of having the seed chilled, frozen, or overheated while in transit in midwinter. In the opinion of department authorities, the greatest need of the large Southern truck grower at present is that of suitable storage facilities for handling fall shipments of seed potatoes. This would do away with the risks of midwinter shipment and enable them to buy seed in the fall when the price is usually much below that of later shipments.

Value of Manure Spreader

It takes as long to load a manure spreader as it does a wagon box, but the spreader will unload and spread the manure in a third of the time. Hauling manure in a wagon box and spreading it on the field with a hand fork is hard work. It can be done much easier with a spreader and the material is more evenly distributed. The spreader is a useful implement to have at any time when manure is to be spread, but particularly so when labor is scarce.

Cows on Sweet Clover

Until cows become used to sweet clover pasture, you should not turn them onto the clover while the dew is on the clover. Cows should be well fed before they are turned into the sweet clover. At first let them in the clover for only a short time and each day you can let them in longer until they become used to it. In a week or ten days there is not much danger of bloat unless the cows are hungry when turned on the clover.

Loss by Lightning

This is a good time to give attention to the protection of the farm buildings against loss by lightning. Rods properly installed afford a high degree of protection. Rods already installed should be carefully inspected to see that all connections and joints are in good condition, and particularly that the ground connections are good. Loss of stock in pastures may be reduced by grounding the wire fences at corners and every 20 rods between.

Loss in Feed Shortage

There is perhaps a greater loss in dairying through a shortage of feed, especially pasture, in summer than almost any other cause. Cows do not produce half of the milk they are capable of producing unless they get sufficient feed. Where the pasture is apt to be short, there are two crops we like to grow as a substitute for the pasture. Oats can be cut early and fed green in the barn, cutting it each day as it is needed.

Red Cedar Trees Harmful

Keep your eye on the red cedar trees for indications of cedar apple, a yellow or orange mass of stuff. Many apple orchards have been permanently injured by this. Cut this off the tree, or, if necessary, take the whole tree.

Preventive Measures

Preventive measures are preferable to remedies for damaged trees, but prevention is not always possible. When mouse damage occurs in orchards, great losses may often be averted by the prompt treatment of the injured trees.

Dainty Tea Apron Can Be Made by Seamstress

Most housewives like dainty tea aprons. Here is one that fills that requirement and is easy to make. Cut the pattern out of paper first; cut it all you get it to fit the way you wish. The shape of the pattern is shown in the illustration. Lay the pattern on your material. Use silk, very sheer organdie or voile. Mark around the pattern with pencil. Have the whole thing plicated. That is, have it hemstitched along the pencil marks. Then cut through the hemstitching. This gives a picot edge. The upper bands cross at the back. Sew the lower part of a snap fastener to each of these straps, and the corresponding part to the underside of the tie strings where they meet the shoulder straps. An apron like this makes a nice gift.—Kansas City Star.

New Line Is Creeping Into That Silhouette

Unquestionably there is a new line creeping into the silhouette, notes a writer in the Kansas City Star. Not that the perfectly straight frock has been ousted from the ranks of fashion, but it has given way a bit to other influences. On more than one of the most recent acquisitions to collections of summer models there is unmistakable evidence that designers have recognized the fact that women have a waistline. These frocks have a certain slim, rather tight look at the waist and hips, and below this the skirt flares until it is quite wide about the hem.

One sees this newer note in afternoon and evening gowns more often than in street costumes which still adhere to a straight slender line. Recently there have been shown a number of lovely dance frocks with straight plain bodices and wide skirts that flare gradually from the waist to the hem. One charming model has a foundation slip of flesh color chiffon delicately embroidered in gold. The overdress is of light brown tulle with a full skirt plicated at the lower edge. The ruffles are arranged at each side, leaving the front and back flat. At the waistline in front are three large gold flowers.

This season calls attention to the bright shade of blue that is so much in vogue at the moment. Fashioned of chiffon, the skirt of circular tendencies is composed of many layers of chiffon, which gives a particularly graceful effect and an indescribable softness. Drooping sprays of flowers of an exquisite shrimp pink are the only trimming, but the color effect is remarkably attractive.

In these days of sudden changes it is difficult to keep fabrics in their place. Those that once were looked upon as purely utilitarian suddenly make their appearance in circles far removed from their former sphere, while materials once considered appropriate only for occasions of ceremony now are used for sports costumes or those of equal informality.

Brown in All Its Moods and Tenses Now Is Rage

The quiet colors and soft shades and blendings are the smart things for summer, brown in all of its tints being the last whisper in style, says the New York Times. There is all the family of brown in its moods and tenses—tete de negre, havana, nut-brown, wood-brown, beige, cocoa, champagne, in soft kid trimmed with glace kid, lizard skin or any one of the many novel leathers in a deeper or contrasting shade. These are far better style than the combinations that mark abrupt contrasts, for the shoe designer has succeeded in convincing his patrons that uniformity and harmonious blending are more complimentary to the size and shape of the foot than the treatment which makes sharp outlines.

All of the new shapes give a more slender appearance to the foot. Though brown is having such a smart vogue, gray is coming into prominence, and some of the finest and dressiest shoes are shown in oriental gray. It is particularly good with the summer colors in gowns. The most charming styles in hostery are imported to wear with brown in all its shades, and now come gray sheer lustrous hose. For, as has been repeatedly emphasized, it is settled that shoes and stockings must match.

Flower Trimmed Hats Again

After a period of hats comparatively untrimmed there is a concerted effort to bring back the flower trimmed midsummer hat. Those of yellow straw ornamented with field flowers are particularly attractive and flattering.

Nature Above Art

"Angela" writes: "Your suggestion of a $100,000 pipe organ to enhance the charms of nature's scenes appeals to me; but please do not forget that in the woods the notes of birds, the sad refrain of the wood dove and the wild, melodious cry of the blue-jay—for he can be melodious—mingled with the murmur of a brook and the sighing of the wind, is an accompaniment that art cannot equal."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Despisers of Mankind

The despisers of mankind—apart from the mere fools and mimics of that breed—are of two sorts. They who believe their merit neglected and unappreciated make up one class; they who receive adulation and flattery, knowing their own worthlessness, compose the other. Be sure that the coldest-hearted misanthropes are ever of this last order.—Charles Dickens.

SALLIE PLANS FOR THE DANCE

By JANE GORDON

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

SALLIE turned her bright eyes toward Miss Loretta. Sallie had come over to spend the afternoon with her friend. It must have been the attraction of dissimilarity which drew these two together. Sallie, young, gay and modern, loved the older woman.

"How she ever managed to keep sweet through all those years she was held in bondage, literally, to that querulous invalid father," young Sallie remarked to her mother, "is more than I can comprehend. I would have been tearing my hair—or his. Then when Jasper Lawson did die Loretta went on being faithful to that gay lover of hers, who has 'kept company' with her since she was able to buy his first ice cream sodas. Oh, Aunt Tilly has told me how Bob Saunders used to hang around Loretta's porch until she could get her father to bed and have the wild excitement of accompanying Bob to our village soda palace. As he was then anticipating a term at college, and saving accordingly, it was Loretta's money that bought the soda.

"When does Bob come again?" the young visitor now asked her friend. The lovely eyes of Miss Loretta shone. "He will be in Stanford this Monday," she said, "but I shall not see him until Tuesday evening. You see, Bob is bringing Mr. Webster, the auditor of his company, and he feels that he must make the trip as enjoyable as possible. So there is to be a dance over at the Stanford club on Monday night. Bob will take Mr. Webster there."

Sallie frowned. "Why do you not go with them?" she questioned. Loretta's soft laughter answered. "Why, my dear, you know I cannot dance. I have not even an appropriate gown. In Stanford we need so little in the way of dress. At the Country club they dress very gayly.

"I know," Sallie's reply was brief. "I go there often." She gazed at her friend with speculative eyes; then, with diplomacy which did her credit, Sallie made a suggestion. "You really ought to manage a party frock or two, for Bob's sake, Loretta, so that he might feel free to ask you to those places. Worth making an effort, isn't it, to please him in this?"

Sallie paused, watching the effect of her planning. "I could teach you the new dance steps, Loretta, right here in your sitting room. I'd have had bring over the victrola. It would be such fun!"

Miss Loretta stared, flushing a becoming pink. "But, Sallie," she objected faintly, "Bob has never mentioned a disappointment in me; he said he liked to think of me sitting at home, being just true—sewing—waiting."

Sallie's smile was misleading. "Bob is going to be surprised," she returned. "He likes you as you are, of course; but now he is going to be ever so proud of you before his friends; he's got to be. Leave it to me, Loretta; am I not successful with my own adoring swains?"

Miss Loretta dimpled. "There is no disputing that, Sallie. But my dress? And could I learn to dance at all presently before the club affair?" "You will learn almost in a night," Sallie prophesied. "You are so graceful. We can wear each other's frocks very well, as far as size is concerned. So, when I am in the city tomorrow buying my own finery for that dance, I can select yours. You shall drive over to the club with mother, dad and I on Monday night and meet Bob and his friend there, as a glorious surprise."

And it was, later, Sallie who led the unsuspecting Bob to his unfamiliar but decidedly charming betrothed, on the memorable evening of the Stanford club dance. He did not appear to be appreciably impressed. The frown of discovery lingered on his handsome brow as he led Loretta to a secluded seat after his first dance and promised to come for her again. Sallie, returning from a whirl with the distinguished Mr. Webster, presented him to Miss Loretta, and left the two together. From that time on, throughout the happy evening, Mr. Webster and Loretta continued in each other's companionship, dancing or strolling about the flower-decked halls.

Bob spoke to Sallie; his tone was fretful. "I don't know what has got into Loretta; she's mighty different all at once. When I asked for another dance she informed me that Webster had all but the last."

"You must not blame Loretta," Sallie comforted. "She does not understand dancing etiquette, and Mr. Webster just wrote up all her dances. He is completely charmed with Loretta; just told me he thought her the rarest sweet thing he had ever seen."

"Webster?" Bob's question was sharp. "Why, Webster is a favorite among the most delightful women everywhere."

Sallie nodded. "But Loretta is unusual. Wait until she has been about a bit, Bob; you'll have to hurry to get a look in."

Bob gazed in new fascination toward the graceful figure of his heretofore neglected fiancée, then, possessively, he made his way to her side. And about that time the distinguished Mr. Webster was begging of the smiling Sallie:

"Now that I have done my duty in attendance upon your fair friend am I to have your promised reward of the last dance upon your program—the last and the best of them all," added Mr. Webster fervently.

Summer Tailleur Is Paris Feature

Garment Is Patterned Along Same Lines as Popular Spring Mode.

The summer tailleur is patterned along the same general lines as its spring predecessor, but it embodies two essential variations—fabric and coat length, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Obviously the woolen materials of the early tailored mode are not particularly adaptable to the more sultry moments of the summer and as a consequence these have been deposed in favor of silk. The smartest constructions are the silk crepe alpacas and taffeta weaves and it is important that heavy threads be used in their manufacture, inasmuch as the straight lines of the tailleur cannot be maintained with lightweight fabrics. For sports wear, flannel has developed an unusual vogue and suits of this material are decidedly de rigueur.

As to the coat, the short, hip-length type has been succeeded by the three-quarters model, although the more abbreviated coat is still far from the ranks of the demodée. The silhouette and general details of the summer tailored mode continue to be very plain and unaffectedly simple, throwing the burden of elaboration once more upon the accessory.

Collars and cuffs, figured organdie or embroidered lawn are a feminizing influence on the O'Rossen type suit, and in conjunction with these an ensemble effect is developed by adding hats and parasols of the same material as the costume. Molyneux is showing some charming accessories made of these sheer cotton fabrics, usually in bright colors. A very striking ensemble from this designer features a suit of dark blue poplinza contrastingly trimmed with a collar and cuffs of cherry-colored organdie embroidered in white. The note of identity is extended to the hat and parasol, which are also made of the embroidered organdie.

Fancy gloves accompany the simplest tailleurs, and the gauntlet type retains its place at the top. These gloves are ornamented with stitching on the back to contrast with the color of the glove itself, the same color theme being emphasized in the lining of the gauntlet, which is also in a directly opposite shade.

Popular Chiffon Dress

Can Be Made at Home

A woman with ability as seamstress can duplicate many of the chiffon dresses popular at present. The majority of these models are made almost exactly on the lines of the bungalow apron. The silhouette is absolutely straight from neck line to hem. The material is from 40 to 44 inches wide, and the amount remaining after the front and back breadths have been laid upon the pattern and cut is used for trimmings.

This remnant, averaging about 18 inches in width, is usually three to three and a half yards long. On one model shown in a smart shop an end of this piece is affixed in cape fashion from the left armpit to the right shoulder across the back. From the right shoulder it is allowed to drop in a graceful drape effect to the skirt hem, where it is doubled back, caught at the right hip and draped across the front to the left hip in apron effect.

On another model the remnant is split into four panels, the edges of each piped. Two are stitched to the waistline at each hip, allowing the material to fall into four graceful panels to the skirt hem. Plaid designs are being extensively used for these dresses.

Sweaters Are Gay

Women's sweaters, in an attempt to keep up with the startling shades seen in men's, are outdoing themselves in batik and futurist colors and designs. Nearly all the newest sweaters have flowered borders.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

GENERAL DRAIN HAS DONE GOOD SERVICE

Gen. James A. Drain of Washington, D. C., prominent in activities of the American Legion since the inception of that organization, was chosen to represent the Legion at the twentieth anniversary conference on child labor because of the intense interest which the Legion has always taken in the welfare of children and the solution of their problems.

The conference was held at Washington in May, just prior to the adoption by congress of the child labor amendment to the Constitution, which now goes to the states for ratification.

General Drain was active at the two caucuses held in Paris at which the American Legion was conceived. He was commander of the District of Columbia department of the Legion from May, 1920, to November, 1921. During the same period he was a member of the national executive committee. He was long chairman of the Fourth district rehabilitation committee.

At the last national convention of the Legion General Drain was one of the leading candidates for national commander. For several ballots he battled with John R. Quinn, the present commander, for that high post.

A lawyer by profession, General Drain has been located at Washington, D. C., for 15 years. He served in the National Guard of the state of Washington, rising from private to brigadier general. From 1901 to 1906 he was adjutant general of the state of Washington.

Interested in movements that made for the upbuilding of the national defense, General Drain took an active part in the National Rifle association and was at one time its president. He was also made chairman of the executive committee of the National Guard Association of the United States. He served in that capacity from 1903 to 1910.

When the World war broke out the general took his place in the front rank of duty. He was assigned as a major in the ordnance officers' reserve corps and was No. 1 on that list. For a few months he served as assistant chief of the division of small arms in the office of the chief of ordnance at Washington.

On June 6, 1917, he was assigned to the First division of the A. E. F. He went with that division to France in that memorable June when the arrival of the first small units of the American forces was hailed with such acclaim by the war-weary allies.

Immediately upon his arrival, General Drain was assigned as one of that group whose important duty it was to study the methods of warfare as they had been evolved in the long, snail-like progress of trench warfare. He went to British and French armies to study ordnance repair and supply.

New things in warfare continued to occupy his attention. On October 1, 1917, he was called to the headquarters of the A. E. F. as chief of the small arms and machine gun division. Tanks, helmets, grenades and the like occupied him here.

He became chief of the tank division in November, 1917. He was the American member of the Anglo-American tank commission, which co-ordinated the activities of the allies in the design, manufacture and issue of many large tanks. He was also ordnance officer of the tank corps.

He returned home in May, 1919, and was discharged in June following. He won the high distinction of the Distinguished Service medal, the Legion d'Honneur and the Cross of the Crown of Italy. He at once resumed the practice of law in Washington and has given unstintingly of his time to the American Legion and the many movements which it has fostered for the upbuilding of the nation.

Origin of the Ring.

One of the earliest examples of the use of rings in statuary was in the statues of Prometheus, who, when released from bondage on the intersection of Venus, wore a ring with a small piece of the Caucasus in it to show that he was still chained to the Caucasus. The idea of a ring being a sign of bondage has continued since those days. Bishops and doctors wore rings by right because they had signed away their independence in order to benefit mankind.

Rest From Labor.

Controlled experiments made upon large numbers of women working at all kinds of tasks have shown that to prevent overfatigue one must rest at regular intervals, not just at will, but quite arbitrarily. Wherever regular recesses have been used among women in factories, the workers have more than made up for the time lost. They have become less tired from their labors.

Tribute to American Architect.

Whether it be the building of a modest home or the latest mastodon of the hotel world, the American architect is the ideal supervisor for the job. Artistic yet practical, farseeing but thorough, unprejudiced and faithful to his employer, he is skilled in everything but the manner of building up his own bank account.—Exchange.

She Felt It, Too.

Cecil (sentimentally)—"Don't you feel gloomy when the sky is overcast with gray, when the rhythmic rain sounds a dirge upon the roof and the landscape's beauties are hidden by the weeping mist?" Hazel (sweetly)—"Yes, it's dreadfully annoying—it does make one's hair come out of curl so!"

To Cut Celluloid

Anyone who has tried to cut sheet celluloid knows that it is not as easy as it looks, says Popular Science Monthly. The best way is to make a deep scratch with a sharp scriber or the like, and part the celluloid by bending it sharply along the scratch. This trick is particularly useful when curved or irregular shapes must be cut.

Eagle Always Admired

From the most ancient times the eagle has been universally regarded as the emblem of might and courage. It was associated with Jupiter in Roman mythology and its figure on the standards of certain Roman legions has descended to the national ensigns of the United States, Germany and Russia. The eagle was adopted by the United States in 1783.

Fatalism

Fatalism is the belief that all events are always prearranged and determined by fate, implying either divine will or physical cause as the underlying force. In other words, a fatalist is disposed to accept every event in human life or in nature as preordained and controlled by fate, thus eliminating freedom of will.

The Sixth Sense

At a primary-school examination one of the questions was with regard to the five senses. A pupil wrote: "The five senses are sneezing, sobbing, crying, yawning, coughing. By the sixth sense is meant an extra one which some folks have. This is snoring."—Boston Transcript.

The Old Hundredth

The Psalm tune, the "Old Hundredth," first appeared in the Genevian psalter for the one hundred and thirty-fourth psalm. In England it was set to the one hundredth psalm. In the new version of 1636 it was called the "Old Hundredth."

WOMAN AUTHOR

Are Children a Drawback for an Ambitious Writer?

One of the questions which I am most often asked, says Isabel Eccles-tone Mackay, is: "Do you find marriage and the possession of children a drawback to the writing of books?" One would almost be tempted to reply: "How can a woman write books without marriage and the possession of children?" Only that can hardly meet the case since so many women can—and do. At the same time it would seem that experiences which mean fulfillment of so much in woman can hardly be looked upon as handicaps in a profession which demands, above all things, understanding of life. If one were to revise the question and ask, "It writing of books a drawback to marriage and the possession of children?" my answer would be briefly "No." One does not write so many books perhaps, but, noting the length of publishers' lists, that can hardly be considered a drawback.

Naturally, where there are children, a woman has infinitely less time for any kind of professional work than a man. This fact she must frankly face if there is to be no confusion of values. But I believe it is equally true that every woman may discover a varying surplus of time which she may fairly appropriate for her own. The person who has never a moment to spare is likely to be a person terribly extravagant with minutes—throwing them away, even! Certainly when children are small it is difficult to reserve a definite place and definite hours for writing. Children are the least stable things in nature and hard and fast rules are impossible until they, too, are captive of regular hours of study. There can be no locked doors or attics with stuffed keyholes when any moment some terrible childish catastrophe may cause the universe to quake. The utmost that one can do at the stage is to explain that "a person has some writing to do" and to dilate feeling upon the advantages of quiet in the near vicinity. The audience will usually be sympathetic and full of promises. But one must not be surprised when a small knock comes to the door and a thrilling whisper demands permission to "just sit, quiet as anything and read." The intentions of the petitioner are so virtuous that to refuse seems churlish, so walking carefully on tiptoe, he (or she) comes softly in and sits down upon the little rocking chair which squeaks ("just like a weenty kitty, mother—don't you like it?") The "reading" book (known by heart) is opened and you return to your desk. But presently a small far-away voice begins, "Once upon a time there were three little bunnies, Floppy, Mopsy—"

"But, my dear, how can a person write while you are reading that lovely story?"

A thoughtful pause, punctuated by squeaks, and then:

"Can't you write while I'm turning the pages?"

After all, when they are little, it comes, more or less, to that; one writes between the turning of the pages—any time—and presently the intervals grow longer.—From Everybody's Magazine for August in which a story by Mrs. Mackay appears.

CLAYTON H. EASTER

Died at Home in Yellowbud—Funeral Wednesday Afternoon.

Clayton Harvey Easter died at his home in Yellowbud Monday evening at 10 o'clock following an illness of sixteen days of neuralgia.

The deceased was born in Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, April 1858. He was the son of Enoch Harvey and Mary Beason Easter. He married Miss Catharine Griffey April 3, 1892. She with two sons and two daughters survive. The children are Clarence and Ray Easter, Mrs. Birdie Holloway and Mrs. Evelyn Bennett. Of her immediate family two brothers and four sisters are living.

The funeral services will be held at the Evangelical church, Yellowbud Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Rev. E. D. Paulin will officiate. Interment will be in Spring Bank cemetery.

Drop in Melon Prices.

Cleveland, July 22.—Eleven carloads of watermelons were sold at auction for from 3 to 20 cents each. They were 26-pound melons and 11 carloads means 10,000 melons. They were selling for 20 to 50 cents at retail compared with 75 cents to $1 last week.

HEARING BEGINS TOMORROW

Leopold-Loeb Case to Be Aired Before Judge Caverly.

EVIDENCE TO BE PRESENTED

Slayers of the Franks Boy Plead Guilty to Murder Charge in Open Court—Testimony of Aliens to Be Introduced to Show the Court the "Degree of Responsibility" of the Defendants.

Chicago, July 22.—Hearing of evidence in the case of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, slayers of Robert Franks, 14-year-old schoolboy, will begin tomorrow before Judge Caverly.

Both youths pleaded guilty yesterday to the murder of the Franks boy. The action came as a surprise to the crowd in the courtroom. The prosecution immediately demanded the death penalty. Clarence Darrow, dean of criminal attorneys, entered the first plea for the prisoners.

State's Attorney Crowe, taken entirely by surprise at the plea of guilty, made no attempt to contest the action, but announced that he would call every state's witness to the stand, "so that the court may hear all the evidence in this case." "We will not allow the defense to shut out any evidence by pleading guilty," Crowe said. "These boys, both of them sane and entirely responsible, have committed the direst murder in the history of Chicago. They have come into open court and publicly entered their plea confessing that they kidnapped and murdered an innocent child. The state has a thorough case against these boys. They must hang. Nothing else must be permitted."

Darrow, in his argument, declared no attempt would be made to set the defendants at liberty. "These boys, your honor, have proven themselves unfit to mingle in society. They must not be set free and no attempt toward that end will be made."

Young Leopold was first called to the bench and himself pleaded guilty. Loeb followed him and did likewise. "Is it your understanding that if you plead guilty to murder in this court, the court may sentence you to death or to the penitentiary for the period of your natural life, or for a period of not less than 14 years?" Judge Caverly asked. Both replied they understood.

Darrow advised the court that before the boys are sentenced he wished to present evidence to the court. Benjamin Bachrach, aiding Darrow, announced that the defense wished to introduce testimony of certain aliens, who have examined Leopold and Loeb in order to show the court "the degree of responsibility" of the defendants.

Believing the defense was attempting to prove the boys insane, Crowe broke in, shouting: "Just a minute, your honor. If the defense in this case is trying to show that these boys are insane, how can they come into this court and legally plead guilty? If there is any question as to the sanity of these boys, the state's attorney demands that a jury of 12 men be selected, so that the state can prove beyond all shadow of a doubt that Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb are sane—that they are guilty of murdering Robert Franks—and that they must hang."

Attorney Bachrach said: "We desire to submit to the court the real evidence in this case, allowing the court to sentence these boys as the court sees fit, understanding, of course, that the court may sentence them to death."

The hearing of evidence will be before Judge Caverly and without a jury.

Sheriff Hoffman announced that extra guards had been assigned to the cells of Leopold and Loeb to preclude any attempt at suicide by the youths.

Paymaster Robbed.
Pittsburgh, July 22.—B. T. P. Taus, manager of the General Cigar company at Bethlehem, Pa., was robbed by two bandits of the semi-monthly payroll, amounting to $17,000. Taus, accompanied by an employee, had driven in his automobile several blocks from a bank when two strangers with drawn revolvers stepped on the running board and ordered him to drive outside of town, where another car was awaiting the bandits. The money was transferred into another satchel, after which the robbers drove away.

FIVE CHILDREN PERISH

Fire Destroys the Farm Home of Their Parents.

Mercer, Pa., July 22.—Five children burned to death in a fire at their parents' farm home near here. They were children of Fred Hegelin and wife—Lafayette, 9; Lee, 8; Enid, 5; Clyde, 3, and Fred, 9 months. The bodies of the little victims were found in the ruins huddled in a corner where they crept as the flames and smoke of the burning home drove them from the windows. The fire broke out on the ground floor while the parents were completing their chores about the barn and garden. Mrs. Hegelin, when she detected the flames, saw it was impossible to save the children from the stairway. She pleaded with them to leap, but they were too frightened to hear her cries.

MANY SUSPECTS ROUNDED UP

Persian Government Seeking Slayers of Imbrie.

AMERICAN MINISTER REPORTS

Death of American Vice Consul at Teheran Said to Have Been Caused by a Sabre Wound in the Head. Mob's Attack Incited by Religious Agitators, It Is Said—Diplomatic Corps at Teheran Aroused.

Washington, July 22.—American Minister Joseph Kornfeld cabled the state department from Teheran, Persia, that 200 persons have been arrested in connection with the murder of Robert W. Imbrie, American consul, who was attacked by a mob in the Persian capital.

Among the suspects rounded up is Tharosi Zeeh, leader of a religious sect in Persia.

The entire Persian press is filled with denunciation of the murder "at a time when the cordial relations between Persia and the United States are unrivaled," Kornfeld reported.

The Persian legation here announced that its charge d'affaires had made the following verbal statement of regret to Acting Secretary of State Crowe: "The Persian government desires to express its utmost regret over the unfortunate murder of Vice Consul Imbrie and the Persian government assures the United States government that it will do everything in its power to fulfill its duty in this hour of distress to apprehend the slayers of Major Imbrie."

A Teheran dispatch states that the vice consul's death was caused by a sabre wound in the head. The situation is considered serious, the dispatch says, because sabers are carried only by the police.

The diplomatic corps at Teheran has sent an energetic note to the Persian government calling attention to the fact that the government's failure to prevent the attack has caused considerable apprehension among foreign residents.

As investigation of the attack continues, it is evident the mob was incited by religious agitators. Imbrie fought vigorously with his heavy cane, knocking down several of the Persians until he finally was felled by a blow from a military sword. The American tried to rise, but was knocked down with a stone and his jaw broken. The crowd, evidently thinking both Imbrie and his companion, Seymour, dead, then retreated and police, who had remained in the background, took the Americans to a hospital.

Word went around that the Americans were still alive and the mob formed again, breaking in doors and windows of the hospital and attacking the two men again. Imbrie apparently already was dead, but his body was beaten. Seymour was dragged through the corridors and left for dead. His condition is serious.

The state department announced that the United States has asked the Persian government for a "precise statement" regarding the responsibility for the killing of Imbrie.

HUGHES SPEAKS

Criticises Growing Volume of Law in the United States.

London, July 22.—Secretary of State Hughes, in an address to members of the bar at Westminster hall here, predicted that efforts to "undermine" the authority of the supreme court of the United States will fail. He criticized the growing volume of law in the United States, saying: "The commonwealths in our union of states, each sovereign within its sphere, are producing laws at a rate which has filled us with anxiety lest no one should be able to know the law. The fertility of the legislative soil is our despair. Our lady of the common law has had an embarrassing progeny. Courts are pouring out decisions in such numbers that only the makers of encyclopedias can keep track of them."

Gasoline Price Slashed.

Piqua, O., July 22.—The Meteor Motor company of Piqua cut the price of gasoline from 21 cents to 16 cents a gallon. Officials of the company declared they could make a fair profit at the new price by purchasing gasoline direct from the refinery in Okmulgee, Okla., in carload lots.

Former Judge Dead.

Akron, O., July 22.—William J. Ahern, Jr., 38, former judge of common pleas court, is dead. He suffered a nervous breakdown about a year ago.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Safety Director Dismissed.

Newark, O., July 22.—W. H. N. Stevens, Republican mayor of Newark, discharged Service Director Charles F. Taylor. The latter was appointed by Stevens when he took office last Jan. 1. According to Taylor, he was discharged because of a "rumpus" in the ranks of the Licking county klan organization. Several weeks ago Taylor and others in Stevens' city cabinet threatened to file charges against the mayor, seeking his removal. The threat was never carried out.

B. & L. Men Meet.

Cleveland, July 22.—Two thousand building and loan officials from 45 states attended the opening session of the thirty-second annual meeting of the United States League of Local Building and Loan associations. The report of the secretary of the association shows that the building and loan associations of the United States now have assets in excess of $4,000,000,000 and that they are serving more than 7,500,000 people.

Village Owes State.

Columbus, July 22.—The village of Glouster owes the state $3,357.87 as the state's share of fines collected for violation of the Crabbe act, according to a report filed by state examiners with Joseph T. Tracy, state auditor. The village owes an additional $156.70 to Athens county for fines in state cases. Findings were returned in favor of the village for $3,650.30.

Demand Jury Trial.

Zanesville, O., July 22.—Motion picture theater owners, arrested for keeping their theaters open Sunday, pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial. This motion will be decided by Municipal Judge Isaac Humphrey this week. The men also requested that the court compel filing cost bonds of $200 in each case in the event the prosecution loses.

Claim Against Directors.

Dayton, O., July 24.—John A. Best, receiver of the Springfield National bank at Springfield, was authorized by Federal Judge John E. Sater to compound a claim of $100,000 against former directors of that bank, in winding up the affairs of the institution.

Urbaytis at Toledo.

Toledo, July 22.—Joe Urbaytis, Toledo postoffice robber, is in the county jail here. He arrived under heavy guard from Columbus, where he had been receiving treatment since May 5, when he was shot by a detective while resisting arrest in that city.

River Man Drowns.

Marletta, O., July 22.—Andrew C. Rowe, 52, caretaker at Ohio river dam No. 18, was drowned while attempting to rescue Dexter Beyer, 40, who fell into the river while working on a dredge boat. The latter was saved by J. E. Ruale, 60, lock engineer.

Hog Prices Soaring.

Cleveland, July 22.—The $9 hog arrived at the Cleveland Union stockyards, replacing the $7.75 porker of last week. Packers announced a general rise in the price of all cuts of fresh pork and advanced rates on some brands of cured.

Senator Walsh Retires.

Washington, July 22.—Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts announced his retirement as chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee. He will be succeeded by Senator Jones of New Mexico. Walsh said he was following the precedent that the position should be held only through one congressional election. The committee's work is largely advisory and cooperative with the Democratic national committee.

CAMPAIGN PLANS MADE KNOWN

Republicans to Conduct a Nationwide Drive for Votes.

AGAINST SECTIONAL CRUSADES

Chairman Butler Announces Program After Conferences at the Capital. Says There Is No Lack of Confidence Among Republicans—Representative Hicks to Manage Eastern Headquarters.

Washington, July 22.—William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican National committee, issued a statement declaring it is the plan of Republican leaders to conduct a nationwide rather than sectional campaign in behalf of Coolidge and Dawes. Mr. Butler said:

"We do not propose to seek support in one section of the country through concentrated and obvious effort and to try to gain it in another section by silence and evasion of issues. The suggestion that the campaign must be centered here or there to assure success or that we must bombard any particular state or group of states, can come only from political parties or candidates that lack national appeal and viewpoint."

Representative F. C. Hicks of New York will be placed in charge of the eastern headquarters, which were opened by Butler last week in New York. Hicks before leaving Washington was in conference at the white house. Mr. Butler will leave tomorrow for Chicago to look after the affairs at the main headquarters there and to confer with Charles G. Dawes regarding his participation in the campaign. Dawes is expected to bear the brunt of the campaign so far as speaking is concerned. It is said to be the intention of the campaign managers to have President Coolidge deliver eight or 10 speeches during the campaign.

Discussing Republican prospects, Mr. Butler said: "July forecasting is hardly an achievement. I will say, though, that judging from the character of the letters, telegrams and messages which I have received, as well as interviews which I had in Chicago and in New York, there is no lack of confidence among the Republicans of the country. I have been particularly pleased in receiving a large number of communications from men and women who admit that their interest in past campaigns has only been incidental, but who are now anxious to participate in the present campaign."

REBELS STILL HOLD CITY OF SAO PAULO

Build Up Strong Organization Around State Army.

Buenos Ayres, July 22.—Brazilian rebels still control the greater portion of the state of Sao Paulo.

In the city of Sao Paulo there is a severe food shortage and price regulation had been started. The rebels also had requisitioned considerable food supplies from the interior, beans, cattle, rice and milk.

According to rebel sources, 600 were killed in the street fighting, which preceded expulsion of federal forces from Sao Paulo city. The Sao Paulo rebels have collected a war fund of 62,000 contos of reis (more than $6,000,000), according to other advices.

Travelers reaching here from Sao Paulo report that discipline in the rebel ranks was excellent and that a formidable military organization had been built up around the state army. The rebel troops seemed well supplied with ammunition and had taken control of several factories which were turning out additional equipment. Guards were posted over banks and business houses.

The general advance of the federal forces, scheduled to take place Saturday, apparently was not attempted.

Costly Blaze.

Cleveland, July 22.—A fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, did $125,000 damage to the Kinsman Builders' Supply company and for a time threatened the southeast district of the city.

BRICK PLANT INVOLVED

Tracy Likely to Refuse to Honor Harper's Warrant.

Columbus, July 22.—Legal action may be taken to prevent the purchase by the state of the Roseville (Muskingum county) brick plant at a price of $35,000. It was considered possible that State Auditor Tracy may refuse to honor Director Harper's warrant, on the ground that the amount paid is excessive, as charged by Republican state headquarters. Unless Auditor Tracy disallows the warrant, mandamus or injunction proceedings are likely.

The brick plant purchase has been the subject of controversy since last week, when Republican state headquarters charged that the $35,000 purchase price paid by the state is $17,000 more than it could have been bought for a year ago. Director Harper denied the charge and said the plant was exactly what the state needed and was a bargain at the price.

LaFollette Campaign Committee.

Washington, July 22.—The LaFollette campaign committee will have Representative John M. Nelson of Wisconsin as its chairman, with headquarters in Chicago, where he now is directing campaign activities. Five members will be selected by Senators La Follette and Wheeler and the others will represent the conference for progressive political action, which indorsed the candidacies of both. The finance committee will be made up of two sections—one representing La Follette and Wheeler, the other the conference.

FIRPO DETAINED

Woman Companion Also Held on Their Arrival in New York.

New York, July 22.—Luis Angel Firpo, South American heavyweight, who arrived here for a match with Harry Wills, was taken to Ellis Island on a technical charge that his passport was improperly vised. With the boxer was taken Senorita Blanca Lourdes, who occupied a stateroom adjoining Firpo's during the voyage from Buenos Ayres. Her passport was for Havana, where the vessel did not touch, and she and Firpo were detained upon her attempt to leave the liner with him. The senorita told officials she was Firpo's secretary, but, under questioning, demonstrated complete ignorance of shorthand, stenography or typing.

Fifty-seven Drowned.

Tokio, July 22.—It was announced here that 57 persons were drowned when the Nippon Yusen Kaisha lighter Matsuyama Maru foundered off Goto island, near Kyushu July 11. The freighter was an old vessel without radio and carried no passengers. The last port made by the vessel was Keelung, Formosa, from which it sailed for Yokohama July 9.

Charged With Forgery.

Cleveland, July 22.—Mrs. Blanche Chamberlain, 31, of Chippewa Lake, charged with having given a forged check for $5,000 as payment for options on real estate valued at $100,000, waived the preliminary examination that had been set for Wednesday and was bound over to the county grand jury by Police Judge Terrell.

JOHNNY WAS A HOME-MAKER

By BENTON GREY

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"YOUR baby's come, Mr. Johnson," announced the postmaster, as the young settler halted his team in front of the post office at Alliance, Miss. "Just wait a minute and I'll bring him out to you." He disappeared within the door that led to his parlor, and presently emerged again, accompanied by his wife and a little boy of some three years, who smiled up confidently into Johnson's face.

"Never knew you was a married man, Mr. Johnson," continued the postmaster sympathetically. "He seems to have made a sure enough long journey across the water all by himself. My wife says she'd be scared to death to send our Ella that distance by post. The mother ain't dead, I hope?"

"My baby!" Johnson yelled. "I'm a single man, Mr. Smith. How can it be my baby?"

The postmaster shook his head dubiously. "He's tagged," he said, "and there's postmarks from most all the places he's passed through. 'C. Johnson, Alliance, Miss.' it reads. This is Alliance, and this is Mississippi, and you're sure enough C. Johnson, aren't you?"

"It's a mistake," groaned Johnson. "I never even dreamed of having a baby."

"Of course, Mrs. Smith will take charge of him for a while, if the sender can be found," said Ed Smith, gloomily. "But, having nine of our own, you'll understand that it would be kind of hard on us to keep him."

"You keep him for a few days until something more is heard about him," said Johnson. "Can't you have the sender traced?"

"I'll do my best," said Mr. Smith, and Johnson rode away.

That night the loneliness of his situation appealed to him more than ever before. He had almost forgotten the faithless young woman who had been the cause of his migration to this half-settled and almost uninhabited region. He had the normal human need of companionship—yet he had no one to call his, neither wife nor parents nor family. He surprised Mr. Smith by appearing at the post office again the next morning.

"I think I'll relieve you of the boy for a few days," he said. "It might be companionable—and then, when you get word of the sender we can have him shipped back again."

He did not return for several days, and when he did appear at the post office, Mr. Smith was amazed to hear the child calling him daddy.

"Well, you see," explained Johnson, sheepishly, "I came to the conclusion that I was a sort of selfish cuss, living all alone, and I might as well do a little good in the world. So Johnny and I have sort of struck up a partnership. He's going to run the home and I'm going to run the farm, aren't we, Johnny?"

"Yeth, daddy," said Johnny, clinging to his new father's coat.

Ed Smith turned to his wife when the cart had rolled away.

"It hate to think of Mr. Johnson's feelings when the real father turns up," he said.

"Perhaps he won't turn up," answered his wife. "Do you suppose—"

"No, no, my dear; it isn't his," her husband answered. "But it's a mighty queer situation."

The problem was solved a few days later by the arrival at the postmaster's office of a pretty and highly excited young woman, who inquired breathlessly for the boy.

"I got word at Alliance, Ark., she explained. "My dead sister's boy, sent from Scotland. She was my only relative. You have him here?"

"Well, not here," the postmaster admitted, rubbing his chin reflectively. "Might your name be Johnson, Miss?"

"Yes, Clarice Johnson."

"Well, it's odd; but the boy was addressed to C. Johnson—that stand for Charles; and as there's only one C. Johnson around here, I gave him to him."

"Then you must take him away at once," answered Miss Johnson.

"Well, I'll try," the postmaster said. "But Mr. Johnson kinder took a hankering after him."

"But he can't have him," cried the young woman, indignantly. "How can a stranger take a child away from his aunt?"

"He can't," admitted Mr. Smith. "Only he's sort of done it. However, you wait here, miss, and I'll get Mr. Johnson down by telephone inside of a couple of hours."

Two hours later Johnson, looking very uncomfortable, arrived with the boy. But Johnny absolutely refused to go with his new-found relative.

"I guess you'd better spend a day or two here, miss," suggested Mrs. Smith. "Then he'll grow sort of used to you, and it won't be so hard on them."

She accepted Mrs. Smith's hospitality. And soon the situation was self-evident. The child had evidently destroyed the original tag, and in re-writing it, the prefix Miss had somehow got placed at the end, where it read Mississippi.

But Johnny proved so reluctant to leave his new-found father that, long before the "day or two" was up, Johnson, having ascertained that Miss Johnson had no ties at Alliance, Ark., made a proposition embracing—

But what other sort of proposition would one expect at a town named Alliance?

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.
(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

THE little shops which line the streets in Florence have marvelously attractive displays. The Italian has an eye for color and proportion and he uses all his skill in the arrangement of his goods. One enters the shop with interest and enthusiasm only to find that it is a case of few, if any bananas. The little dinky showcase in the dark interior is almost empty. Every thing is in the window. There is little or no stock in reserve. You go out a little disappointed; you had expected much and found little.

It pays to advertise, and many public and professional men go into it extensively. Hughes was one of these. He had a fine front and an impressive manner. He never went out of town without a detailed mention in the local paper. He never did anything or said anything or contemplated doing or saying anything that did not receive double-headed attention from the press.

"Our distinguished citizen, the Hon. W. J. Hughes," etc. You know the rest. He may have bought a baby buggy or had a tooth pulled, but he believed in advertising. The only trouble was that when you got inside his intellectual shop, the showcase was empty. His display was all in the window.

Bill Milliken was very different. He was shy and reticent in conversation and unaggressive in meeting people. His little dark office was reached by a rickety stairway which had seldom felt the touch of a broom. The sign that announced to the public "William Milliken, Attorney," was painted in black and could hardly be read. Bill's show window was very badly arranged. His advertisements were poorly written. But when you got into his establishment and talked to him a while, you found he had the goods—beautiful things which he could attractively display. The facts were that Bill knew more than any other lawyer in the county. Ten minutes of his advice was worth more than an hour of Hughes'. He simply didn't know how to advertise.

As I said it pays to advertise, and some men do too little of it, but if you do advertise, you ought to have the goods.

Beyond Shaw's Vision

A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it; it would be hell on earth.—George B. Shaw.

Homes for Aged

Accounts are not very definite concerning the establishment of the first home exclusively for the aged. In England in early days and in Germany at the end of the Seventeenth century there were hospitals to which the aged and infirm could go. Such a hospital was founded by St. Cross near Winchester, England, in 1196, and another, the Coningsby hospital at Hereford, was founded in 1614.

Future Possibility

Waste power now tumbling over Victoria falls, Africa, may be running machinery in New York and Chicago when the present plans for power transmission without wires are perfected.

Value of Forests

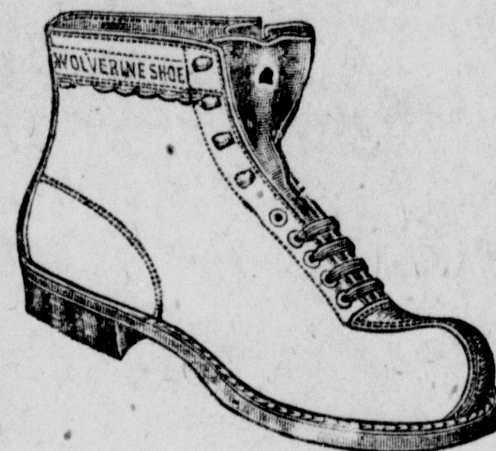

The Department of Agriculture says that removal of forests destroys the ground cover of leaf-mold, which once absorbed rain and snow waters, holding and distributing them to the soil. Cleared of forest and its spongy ground cover, the bare soil absorbs comparatively little water, most of which runs off rapidly, swelling streams and flooding and eroding the lower ground.

QUARTER-TONE PIANO INVENTED BY GERMAN

Fascinating Effect Produced by New Instrument, Say Musicians Who Have Heard It.

Berlin.—New fine points for jazz music will be made possible by the invention by Grotian Steinweg of Brunswick, Germany, of a quarter-tone piano which produces sounds described as a cross between the gilding of ukulele and a banjo and the exotic intervals of a Chinese string piano.

Two pianos, one of which is tuned to standard pitch and the other of which is tuned a quarter tone higher, are connected with a keyboard on which red and brown keys are inserted between the ordinary black and white keys. The playing of this new composite instrument is said to have a fascinating effect, according to persons who have heard concerts given by the inventor.

Alois Haba, composer of quarter-tone music, who has been at work on scores of this kind for some time, sees a far-reaching future in quarter-tone music and regards Herr Steinweg's invention as epoch-making.

Not only will the ear have to become accustomed to differentiating between intervals of only a quarter of a tone, but the whole technique of piano playing will be changed. Women with small hands will be eliminated as pianists since the new octave will require a greater hand span.

The entire mechanism of playing will also become greatly complicated since there will be one-third more keys.

Musical critics who have heard Herr Steinweg's instrument have reserved judgment on it. They appear to fear being classed as old-timers if they do not fall in with the modern tendency toward the unusual, yet at the same time they admit their ears are not yet educated up to the new invention.

Resigns at 84, After 62 Years as Teacher

Miss Nellie F. Cornell, aged eighty-four, has just resigned after a service of 62 years, in the public schools of Rochester, N. Y., the last 47 as a principal. The only break in the continuity of her service was two brief periods of illness in her first years of teaching. Among the pupils in her school at the time she resigned were many grandchildren of former pupils. Miss Cornell was born in Rochester October 10, 1840. Her mother was a pioneer school teacher and her father, Stephen Cornell, was a cousin of Ezra Cornell, founder of Cornell university.

Immigrants Take Up Pacific Waste Lands

Olympia, Wash.—Immigrants from eastern United States are steadily moving into the West and many of the counties of this state have received large deputations of Hollanders, Italians, Russians and Scandinavians this spring. They are welcomed, as the majority have funds enough to take up land and begin farming and other agricultural pursuits.

The Hollanders with several colonies of Swiss, have settled in the southwest section, where dairying predominates. Cheese-making is a growing industry and has attracted considerable capital from the immigrants who know the business.

On the logged-off lands pasture grasses grow abundantly and dairying is profitable from the start.

A majority of the Italians, with some Serbians, are skilled in fruit growing, and hundreds of young orchards have been set out among the stumps of southwestern Washington. Others have engaged in nut culture, planting filberts, walnuts and pecans. In the district near Winlock 80 new comers built poultry plants, and more than 500,000 chicks have been imported for the nucleus of next year's laying flocks.

Priest Dies at 110

Guanaajuato, Mexico.—Despite his advanced age, Father Jose Guadalupe Castorena continued serving his flock almost to the day of his death, which occurred after he had passed his one hundred and tenth birthday anniversary. He is believed to have been one of the oldest residents of Mexico whose birth record could be established beyond a doubt.

Meaning of "Cuba"

The meaning of the word "Cuba" is unknown. The island was known by that name among the natives when it was discovered in 1492 by Columbus. Several attempts were made by Columbus to have the island named after various members of the Spanish royal family, but they all failed.

Wind Spreads Seeds

The wind plays an important part in spreading the numerous down-covered seeds when the cotton plant is not systematically cultivated, says Nature Magazine. The rot penetrates deep into the soil. The plant responds readily to differences in climate, soil and method of growing.

Where Women Propose

It is the women who do the proposing in Dahomey. When a girl reaches the age of eighteen she is eligible for matrimony, and she at once sets out to find some one willing to marry her. Frequently she takes a husband on trial for a month or two before choosing him for better or worse.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective Insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

To Decide Fate of Bride.

Judge Henry Scarlett of the county courts, was called upon Tuesday morning to determine whether Katherine Fern Kleinbell will go to her father, Otey Kleinbell, 8989 Sunbury road, or to Casper Hilton, who married her on July 10, at Circleville. Katherine, according to her father, will not be 15 years old until next October and notwithstanding that fact was married to Hilton, who claims to be 24 years old but who is said by probation officers to be 32 years old. Both bride and bridegroom have filed habeas corpus proceedings, which will be heard by Judge Scarlett to secure possession of the bride.—Columbus Dispatch.

Eggs as Coins

Money is not the only form of currency existent, though it is the only form internationally recognized. Norway sometimes uses corn for coin; the Fijians use whales' teeth; while chocolate, coconuts, and eggs are employed in the interior of South America. HITLER LAND
AT AUCTIONSale of 1635 Acres in Pickaway Plains Brought $209,788.49.*H. M. Crites Bought 943 15 Acres for $127,372—Board of Education Gets 515 Acres for $57,761—177.37 Sold to S. T. Ruggles for $24,654.

What was the largest public land sale ever held in Pickaway county was that held at the court house Monday when 1635.52 acres of the Nelson Hitler estate were offered by the surviving executor, George Steely, and the amount of the sale was $209,788.49. These lands are in the famous Pickaway Plains and attracted a large number of bidders from various parts of the state.

Dresbach Brothers and C. G. Chalfin were the auctioneers and Charles H. May is the attorney for the executor.

The first, second, fourth and fifth tracts amounting in area to 943.15 was purchased by H. M. Crites for $127,372.30 as follows: First tract, 105 acres at $138 an acre, $14,490; second tract, 226.20 acres, at $135 an acre, $30,537; fourth tract, 301.75 acres at $130 an acre, $39,227.50; fifth tract 310.02 acres, at $139 an acre, $43,117.80. Third tract of 177.37 acres sold at $139 an acre and was purchased by S. T. Ruggles for $24,654.43. The sixth tract of 515.73 acres was sold for $112 an acre, total $57,761.76. This tract was purchased by Frank J. Bennett.

On the first and second tract purchased by Mr. Crites he assumed the payment of an annuity of $600 payable each year during the life of Amelia Ludwig, widow of Henry O. Ludwig, who formerly owned these two tracts. The land was sold on the following terms; ten per cent down, forty per cent September 1, or when the deeds are delivered and the balance September 1, 1925.

The sale of last Monday amounting to $209,788.49 added to the previous sales that of June 9 and June 30 which were as follows: June 9, tract of 199.42 acres sold to Clifton and Grace Reichelderfer for $22,833.59 and the timber tract of 95 acres, sold to the Prendergast company for $15,200, a total of $38,033.59. Of this amount Nelson Hitler's estate gets only two-thirds, the other third is owned by Miss Della Phillips. The Hitler estate gets only $25,355.73.

On June 30, a tract of land 162.52 acres was purchased by Marvin Steely for $18,790.41 and another tract of 186.24 acres was sold at the same time to Harvey W. Dresbach for $16,947.84. This sale totaled $35,738.25.

The grand total of the three sales is $270,882.40 and this amount less expenses goes to the trustee of the board of education of Pickaway township.

At the time of this sale, Mr. Crites was the largest landowner in the county, having about 4000 acres, and his purchase of 943.15 acres Monday makes his holdings now over 5000 acres.

AMUSEMENTS

A domestic melodrama of the finest a story of human strength and weakness is the Paramount picture, "His Children's Children," which opened at the Met theater last evening. The production, with Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Mackaill, James Rennie and George Fawcett in featured roles, is an adaptation by Monte M. Katterjohn of a new novel by Arthur Train and it was excellently produced by Sam Wood.

The story is one of a multi-millionaire railroad magnate who on his fifty fifth birthday anniversary comes to the decision, that he is going to "lay off." His three daughters, Diana, Sheila and Claudia, have become almost strangers in his household. Always on the go, Diana and Sheila, for Claudia has been unfortunate in her marriage with a scapegrace Englishman, find little, if any time to devote to household duties. They are ultra-modern young women with but one aim in life, enjoyment, found through the artificial channels of dope, Greenwich Village and the like. Peter B. Kayne, the old grandfather, is unable to restrain them.

Financial reverses revolutionize the Kayne household and it is then that the girls "come to." Diana in particular, becomes quite domesticated, happy in the love of Lloyd Maitland, played by James Rennie. Bebe Daniels portrays the role of Diana while Dorothy Mackaill is cast as the wayward Sheila. George Fawcett has the excellent character part of old Peter B. himself. Among the more prominent players in the supporting cast are Hale Hamilton, Mary Eaton, Mahlon Hamilton, Warner Oland, Lawrence D'Orsay and John Davidson. "His Children's Children" is an extremely powerful production and one that is sure to strike home anywhere. It is a delightful story of everyone's home and family and you'll enjoy it immensely.

NOT WORRIED

Four Republican Candidates Not Concerned About Primary.

Four Republican candidates for re-nomination next month for state offices are not at all worried about the result. They are Colonel Thad H. Brown, secretary of state, J. T. Tracy state auditor, C. C. Crabbe, attorney general and Harry S. Day, state treasurer. Those who would oppose any of these candidates for a second term are just realizing the effect of the recent Republican state convention resolution may have had upon their political aspirations. The convention delegates without a dissenting vote not only endorsed the present incumbents, but went further and pledged their support for another term for each and every one of them. Opposition to these candidates is virtually nil, and realizing this fact none of them so far have made any effort to organize or make any serious efforts for the nominations.

WILSON A. TOOTLE

Died at His Home in Ross County After Short Illness.

Wilson Asbury Tootle, a farmer of South Union township, Ross county, died at his home Sunday, July 20, at 1:30 o'clock after a two months' illness with a complication of diseases. He was born in South Union township Ross county, August 10, 1846, and was the son of John and Mary Brown Tootle. His wife, Mrs. Mary C. Hoddy Tootle preceded him to the grave a number of years ago. Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Clarence Trego, seven grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Eleanor Layton, of North Union township.

Funeral services were held from Brown's chapel, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Stephenson officiated. Interment in Brown's chapel cemetery.

HAY FEVER

Ragweeds May be Prevented by Cultivation or Clover Seeding.

Hay fever, as defined in the July issue of "Hygenia" is a disease caused for the most part by irritation from plant pollens. Hay fever has three forms—the early spring, the early summer and the late summer or fall types, and the symptoms are essentially the same in each. The autumn form is by the most common, altho some people are susceptible to more than one variety.

Ragweeds, of which there are several species, most commonly cause this disease, at least in the eastern and northern United States, altho pollens from a great variety of plants are known to produce hay fever occasionally.

Uncultivated areas such as roadsides, vacant lots and fence corners are frequented by the undesirable ragweed. They flower from about the middle of August to the middle of October, unless killed earlier by frost. During the flowering season each normal plant produces billions of pollens.

More than 1,000,000 persons in the United States suffer annually from hay fever. Depending on the susceptibility of the patient and the proportion of pollen in the air, the attacks vary in severity from the symptoms of a mild cold to complete incapacitation.

Ragweeds may be prevented from growing by cultivation or by thick seeding with clover. Areas impractical for cultivation, such as roadsides and other waste places, should be mowed before the plants pollinate. Weeding is a humanitarian activity because it saves suffering, and health officers in cities should take care that the grass and weed ordinances are enforced.

Severely Injured.

While storing hay in a loft on the Millar farm near South Bloomfield last Saturday a rope attached to a horse, broke when the animal stumbled. One end hit T. C. Millar of this city on the right knee, injuring it badly. Harold Tatman, a grandson of County Commissioner S. D. Stout, of this city, who was riding the horse was badly injured. The latter was taken to a hospital in Columbus for treatment. Dr. Hosler of Ashville and Dr. Jones of this city gave medical attention to Mr. Millar, who is getting along nicely at his home.

Harvest of the Sea

Fish to the value of $50,000,000 are consumed annually by mankind. Of this amount Europe collects about half, the United States nearly one-third and the remaining one-sixth goes to the rest of the world. Translating this into weight, America uses about 2,500,000,000 pounds of fish a year, including shellfish.

Poets Draw the Line

"It's easy enough to catch one of these wandering poets," says the Red-bone Weekly, "but, after you rope him in, the hardest job in the country is to put him to work and sweat the 'fire of genius' out of him, for it seems to be all he's got to brag about, and the Lord knows that's just nothin' at all!"

Conscription in America

Conscription was not resorted to in the Revolutionary war. The first bill of this kind was introduced into an American congress by the conscription act of October 27, 1814, under the auspices of the then secretary of war, James Monroe. This was not carried out.

Avoid Injury in

Harvesting Seed

Most Potato Growers Do Not

Appreciate Importance of Proper Handling.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The average seed-potato grower does not fully appreciate the importance of using every means to prevent injury to the tubers from rough handling during the process of harvesting and storing, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Mechanical injuries to a tuber are sources for the entrance of infection which rapidly spreads to other tubers which come in contact with the injured one. If the crop is grown on land which contains many small stones the tubers are almost certain to be more severely injured than when grown in a sandy, loam soil. Hand digging is not always feasible, but it is believed that where small stones abound in the soil it will be desirable to harvest the home seed plot by hand. Much injury will be avoided if the seed stock designed for planting the field plot for the ensuing year is picked directly into crates in which it is allowed to remain throughout the storage period.

Proper Storage.

Storage conditions necessary to insure vigorous seed at planting time are more easily provided in the North than in the South. In the former region a well-constructed cellar, pit, or cave serves reasonably well. The main thing is to keep the room temperature sufficiently low to retard germination. The ideal seed tuber is one which has not wasted any of its stored-up energy by excessive loss through sprouting. It should be firm with the first sprouts just showing. Such tubers can be depended upon, if suitable conditions prevail, to start quickly when planted and to make a vigorous growth.

Plans for Seed.

The general practice among Southern growers of securing seed from the North involves, in the absence of suitable storage conditions, one of two things: Either getting the seed potatoes late in the fall and holding them over in dugouts, pits, or cellars, with consequent sprouting before planting, or the risk of having the seed chilled, frozen, or overheated while in transit in midwinter. In the opinion of department authorities, the greatest need of the large Southern truck grower at present is that of suitable storage facilities for handling fall shipments of seed potatoes. This would do away with the risks of midwinter shipment and enable them to buy seed in the fall when the price is usually much below that of later shipments.

Value of Manure Spreader

It takes as long to load a manure spreader as it does a wagon box, but the spreader will unload and spread the manure in a third of the time. Hauling manure in a wagon box and spreading it on the field with a hand fork is hard work. It can be done much easier with a spreader and the material is more evenly distributed. The spreader is a useful implement to have at any time when manure is to be spread, but particularly so when labor is scarce.

Cows on Sweet Clover

Until cows become used to sweet clover pasture, you should not turn them onto the clover while the dew is on the clover. Cows should be well fed before they are turned into the sweet clover. At first let them in the clover for only a short time and each day you can let them in longer until they become used to it. In a week or ten days there is not much danger of bloat unless the cows are hungry when turned on the clover.

Loss by Lightning

This is a good time to give attention to the protection of the farm buildings against loss by lightning. Rods properly installed afford a high degree of protection. Rods already installed should be carefully inspected to see that all connections and joints are in good condition, and particularly that the ground connections are good. Loss of stock in pastures may be reduced by grounding the wire fences at corners and every 20 rods between.

Loss in Feed Shortage

There is perhaps a greater loss in dairying through a shortage of feed, especially pasture, in summer than almost any other cause. Cows do not produce half of the milk they are capable of producing unless they get sufficient feed. Where the pasture is apt to be short, there are two crops we like to grow as a substitute for the pasture. Oats can be cut early and fed green in the barn, cutting it each day as it is needed.

Red Cedar Trees Harmful

Keep your eye on the red cedar trees for indications of cedar apple, a yellow or orange mass of stuff. Many apple orchards have been permanently injured by this. Cut this off the tree, or, if necessary, take the whole tree.

Preventive Measures

Preventive measures are preferable to remedies for damaged trees, but prevention is not always possible. When mouse damage occurs in orchards, great losses may often be averted by the prompt treatment of the injured trees.

Dainty Tea Apron Can

Be Made by Seamstress

Most housewives like dainty tea aprons. Here is one that fills that requirement and is easy to make. Cut the pattern out of paper first; cut and pin it to the way you wish. The shape of the pattern is shown in the illustration. Lay the pattern on your material. Use silk, very sheer organdie or voile. Mark around the pattern with pencil. Have the whole thing picoté. That is, have it hemstitched along the pencil marks. Then cut through the hemstitching. This gives a picot edge. The upper bands cross at the back. Sew the lower part of a snap fastener to each of these straps, and the corresponding part to the underside of the tie strings where they meet the shoulder straps. An apron like this makes a nice gift.—Kansas City Star.

New Line Is Creeping

Into That Silhouette

Unquestionably there is a new line creeping into the silhouette, notes a writer in the Kansas City Star. Not that the perfectly straight frock has been ousted from the ranks of fashion, but it has given way a bit to other influences. On more than one of the most recent acquisitions to collections of summer models there is unmistakable evidence that designers have recognized the fact that women have a waistline. These frocks have a certain slim, rather tight look at the waist and hips, and below this the skirt flares until it is quite wide about the hem.

One sees this newer note in afternoon and evening gowns more often than in street costumes which still adhere to a straight slender line. Recently there have been shown a number of lovely dance frocks with straight plain bodices and wide skirts that flare gradually from the waist to the hem. One charming model has a foundation slip of flesh color chiffon delicately embroidered in gold. The overdress is of light brown tulle with a full skirt picoté at the lower edge. The fullness is arranged at each side, leaving the front and back flat. At the waistline in front are three large gold flowers.

This season calls attention to the bright shade of blue that is so much in vogue at the moment. Fashioned of chiffon, the skirt of circular tendencies is composed of many layers of chiffon, which gives a particularly graceful effect and an indescribable softness. Drooping sprays of flowers of an exquisite shrimp pink are the only trimming, but the color effect is remarkably attractive.

In these days of sudden changes it is difficult to keep fabrics in their place. Those that once were looked upon as purely utilitarian suddenly make their appearance in circles far removed from their former sphere, while materials once considered appropriate only for occasions of ceremony now are used for sports costumes or those of equal informality.

Brown in All Its Moods

and Tenses Now Is Rage

The quiet colors and soft shades and blendings are the smart things for summer, brown in all of its tints being the last whisper in style, says the New York Times. There is all the family of brown in its moods and tenses—tete de negre, havanna, nut-brown, wood-brown, beige, cocoa, champagne, in soft kid trimmed with glace kid, lizard skin or any one of the many novel leathers in a deeper or contrasting shade. These are far better style than the combinations that mark abrupt contrasts, for the shoe designer has succeeded in convincing his patrons that uniformity and harmonious blending are more complimentary to the size and shape of the foot than the treatment which makes sharp outlines. All of the new shapes give a more slender appearance to the foot. Though brown is having such a smart vogue, gray is coming into prominence, and some of the finest and dressiest shoes are shown in oriental gray. It is particularly good with the summer colors in gowns. The most charming styles in hosiery are imported to wear with brown in all its shades, and now come gray sheer lustrous hose. For, as has been repeatedly emphasized, it is settled that shoes and stockings must match.

Flower Trimmed Hats Again

After a period of hats comparatively untrimmed there is a concerted effort to bring back the flower trimmed midsummer hat. Those of yellow straw ornamented with field flowers are particularly attractive and flattering.

Nature Above Art

"Angela" writes: "Your suggestion of a $100,000 pipe organ to enhance the charms of nature's scenes appeals to me; but please do not forget that in the woods the notes of birds, the sad refrain of the wood dove and the wild, melodious cry of the blue-jay—for he can be melodious—mingled with the murmur of a brook and the sighing of the wind, is an accompaniment that art cannot equal."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Despisers of Mankind

The despisers of mankind—apart from the mere fools and mimics of that breed—are of two sorts. They who believe their merit neglected and unappreciated make up one class; they who receive adulation and flattery, knowing their own worthlessness, compose the other. Be sure that the coldest-hearted misanthropes are ever of this last order.—Charles Dickens.

SALLIE PLANS FOR THE DANCE

By JANE GORDON

SALLIE turned her bright eyes toward Miss Loretta. Sallie had come over to spend the afternoon with her friend. It must have been the attraction of dissimilarity which drew these two together. Sallie, young, gay and modern, loved the older woman.

"How she ever managed to keep sweet through all those years she was held in bondage, literally, to that querulous invalid father," young Sallie remarked to her mother, "is more than I can comprehend. I would have been tearing my hair—or his. Then when Jasper Lawson did Loretta went on being faithful to that gay lover of hers, who has 'kept company' with her since she was able to buy his first ice cream sodas. Oh, Aunt Tilly has told me how Bob Saunders used to hang around Loretta's porch until she could get her father to bed and have the wild excitement of accompanying Bob to our village soda palace. As he was then anticipating a term at college, and saving accordingly, it was Loretta's money that bought the soda.

"When does Bob come again?" the young visitor now asked her friend. The lovely eyes of Miss Loretta shone. "He will be in Stanford this Monday," she said, "but I shall not see him until Tuesday evening. You see, Bob is bringing Mr. Webster, the auditor of his company, and he feels that he must make the trip as enjoyable as possible. So there is to be a dance over at the Stanford club on Monday night. Bob will take Mr. Webster there."

Sallie frowned. "Why do you not go with them?" she questioned. Loretta's soft laughter answered. "Why, my dear, you know I cannot dance. I have not even an appropriate gown. In Stanford we need so little in the way of dress. At the Country club they dress very gayly.

"I know," Sallie's reply was brief. "I go there often." She gazed at her friend with speculative eyes; then, with diplomacy which did her credit, Sallie made a suggestion. "You really ought to manage a party frock or two, for Bob's sake, Loretta, so that he might feel free to ask you to those places. Worth making an effort, isn't it, to please him in this?"

Sallie paused, watching the effect of her planning. "I could teach you the new dance steps, Loretta, right here in your sitting room. I'd have had bring over the victrola. It would be such fun!"

Miss Loretta stared, flushing a becoming pink. "But, Sallie," she objected faintly, "Bob has never mentioned a disappointment in me; he said he liked to think of me sitting at home, being just true—sewing—waiting."

Sallie's smile was misleading. "Bob is going to be surprised," she returned. "He likes you as you are, of course; but now he is going to be ever so proud of you before his friends; he's got to be. Leave it to me, Loretta; am I not successful with my own adoring swains?"

Miss Loretta dimpled. "There is no disputing that, Sallie. But my dress? And could I learn to dance at all presentably before the club affair?" "You will learn almost in a night," Sallie prophesied. "You are so graceful. We can wear each other's frocks very well, as far as size is concerned. So, when I am in the city tomorrow buying my own finery for that dance, I can select yours. You shall drive over to the club with mother, dad and I on Monday night and meet Bob and his friend there, as a glorious surprise."

And it was, later, Sallie who led the unsuspecting Bob to his unfamiliar but decidedly charming betrothed, on the memorable evening of the Stanford club dance. He did not appear to be appreciably impressed. The frown of discovery lingered on his handsome brow as he led Loretta to a secluded seat after his first dance and promised to come for her again. Sallie, returning from a whirl with the distinguished Mr. Webster, presented him to Miss Loretta, and left the two together. From that time on, throughout the happy evening, Mr. Webster and Loretta continued in each other's companionship, dancing or strolling about the flower-decked halls.

Bob spoke to Sallie; his tone was fretful. "I don't know what has got into Loretta; she's mighty different all at once. When I asked for another dance she informed me that Webster had all but the last."

"You must not blame Loretta," Sallie comforted. "She does not understand dancing etiquette, and Mr. Webster just wrote up all her dances. He is completely charmed with Loretta; just told me he thought her the rarest sweet being he had ever seen."

"Webster?" Bob's question was sharp. "Why, Webster is a favorite among the most delightful women everywhere."

Sallie nodded. "But Loretta is unusual. Wait until she has been about a bit, Bob; you'll have to hurry to get a look in."

Bob gazed in new fascination toward the graceful figure of his heretofore neglected fiancée, then, possessively, he made his way to her side. And about that time the distinguished Mr. Webster was begging of the smiling Sallie:

"Now that I have done my duty in attendance upon your fair friend am I to have your promised reward of the last dance upon your program—the last and the best of them all," added Mr. Webster fervently.

Summer Tailleur Is Paris Feature

Garment Is Patterned Along Same Lines as Popular Spring Mode.

The summer tailleur is patterned along the same general lines as its spring predecessor, but it embodies two essential variations—fabric and coat length, writes a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Obviously the woolen materials of the early tailored mode are not particularly adaptable to the more sultry moments of the summer and as a consequence these have been deposed in favor of silk. The smartest constructions are the silk crepe alpaca and taffeta weaves and it is important that heavy threads be used in their manufacture, inasmuch as the straight lines of the tailleur cannot be maintained with lightweight fabrics. For sports wear, flannel has developed an unusual vogue and suits of this material are decidedly de rigueur.

As to the coat, the short, hip-length type has been succeeded by the three-quarters model, although the more abbreviated coat is still far from the ranks of the demodee. The silhouette and general details of the summer tailored mode continue to be very plain and unaffectedly simple, throwing the burden of elaboration once more upon the accessory.

Collars and cuffs, figured organdie or embroidered lawn are a feminizing influence on the O'Rossen type suit, and in conjunction with these an ensemble effect is developed by adding hats and parasols of the same material as the costume. Molyneux is showing some charming accessories made of these sheer cotton fabrics, usually in bright colors. A very striking ensemble from this designer features a suit of dark blue popalga contrastingly trimmed with a collar and cuffs of cherry-colored organdie embroidered in white. The note of identity is extended to the hat and parasol, which are also made of the embroidered organdie.

Fancy gloves accompany the simplest tailleurs, and the gauntlet type retains its place at the top. These gloves are ornamented with stitching on the back to contrast with the color of the glove itself, the same color theme being emphasized in the lining of the gauntlet, which is also in a directly opposite shade.

Popular Chiffon Dress Can Be Made at Home

A woman with ability as seamstress can duplicate many of the chiffon dresses popular at present. The majority of these models are made almost exactly on the lines of the bungalow apron. The silhouette is absolutely straight from neck line to hem. The material is from 40 to 44 inches wide, and the amount remaining after the front and back breadths have been laid upon the pattern and cut is used for trimming.

This remnant, averaging about 18 inches in width, is usually three to three and a half yards long. On one model shown in a smart shop an end of this piece is affixed in cape fashion from the left armpit to the right shoulder across the back. From the right shoulder it is allowed to drop in a graceful drape effect to the skirt hem, where it is doubled back, caught at the right hip and draped across the front to the left hip in apron effect.

On another model the remnant is split into four panels, the edges of each pieced. Two are stitched to the waistline at each hip, allowing the material to fall into four graceful panels to the skirt hem. Plaid designs are being extensively used for these dresses.

Sweaters Are Gay

Women's sweaters, in an attempt to keep up with the startling shades seen in men's, are outdoing themselves in batik and futuristic colors and designs. Nearly all the newest sweaters have flowered borders.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

GENERAL DRAIN HAS DONE GOOD SERVICE

Gen. James A. Drain of Washington, D. C., prominent in activities of the American Legion since the inception of that organization, was chosen to represent the Legion at the twentieth anniversary conference on child labor because of the intense interest which the Legion has always taken in the welfare of children and the solution of their problems.

The conference was held at Washington in May, just prior to the adoption by congress of the child labor amendment to the Constitution, which now goes to the states for ratification.

General Drain was active at the two caucuses held in Paris at which the American Legion was conceived. He was commander of the District of Columbia department of the Legion from May, 1920, to November, 1921. During the same period he was a member of the national executive committee. He was long chairman of the fourth district rehabilitation committee.

At the last national convention of the Legion General Drain was one of the leading candidates for national commander. For several ballots he battled with John R. Quinn, the present commander, for that high post.

A lawyer by profession, General Drain has been located at Washington, D. C., for 15 years. He served in the National Guard of the state of Washington, rising from private to brigadier general. From 1901 to 1906 he was adjutant general of the state of Washington.

Interested in movements that made for the upbuilding of the national defense, General Drain took an active part in the National Rifle association and was at one time its president. He was also made chairman of the executive committee of the National Guard Association of the United States. He served in that capacity from 1903 to 1910.

When the World war broke out the general took his place in the front rank of duty. He was assigned as a major in the ordnance officers' reserve corps and was No. 1 on that list. For a few months he served as assistant chief of the division of small arms in the office of the chief of ordnance at Washington.

On June 6, 1917, he was assigned to the first division of the A. E. F. He went with that division to France in that memorable June when the arrival of the first small units of the American forces was hailed with such acclaim by the war-weary allies.

Immediately upon his arrival, General Drain was assigned as one of that group whose important duty it was to study the methods of warfare as they had been evolved in the long, snail-like progress of trench warfare. He went to British and French armies to study ordnance repair and supply.

New things in warfare continued to occupy his attention. On October 1, 1917, he was called to the headquarters of the A. E. F. as chief of the small arms and machine gun division. Tanks, helmets, grenades and the like occupied him here.

He became chief of the tank division in November, 1917. He was the American member of the Anglo-American tank commission, which co-ordinated the activities of the allies in the design, manufacture and issue of many large tanks. He was also ordnance officer of the tank corps.

He returned home in May, 1919, and was discharged in June following. He won the high distinction of the Distinguished Service medal, the Legion d'Honneur and the Cross of the Crown of Italy. He at once resumed the practice of law in Washington and has given unstintingly of his time to the American Legion and the many movements which it has fostered for the upbuilding of the nation.

Origin of the Ring.

One of the earliest examples of the use of rings in statuary was in the statues of Prometheus, who, when released from bondage on the intercession of Venus, wore a ring with a small piece of the Caucasus in it to show that he was still chained to the Caucasus. The idea of a ring being a sign of bondage has continued since those days. Bishops and doctors wore rings by right because they had signed away their independence in order to benefit mankind.

Rest From Labor.

Controlled experiments made upon large numbers of women working at all kinds of tasks have shown that to prevent overfatigue one must rest at regular intervals, not just at will, but quite arbitrarily. Wherever regular recesses have been used among women in factories, the workers have more than made up for the time lost. They have become less tired from their labors.

Tribute to American Architect.

Whether it be the building of a modest home or the latest mastodon of the hotel world, the American architect is the ideal supervisor for the job. Artistic yet practical, farseeing but thorough, unprejudiced and faithful to his employer, he is skilled in everything but the manner of building up his own bank account.—Exchange.

She Felt It, Too.

Cecil (sentimentally)—"Don't you feel gloomy when the sky is overcast with gray, when the rhythmic rain sounds a dirge upon the roof and the landscape's beauties are hidden by the weeping mist?" Hazel (sweetly)—"Yes, it's dreadfully annoying—it does make one's hair come out of curl so!"

Too High for Safety.

We are in favor of the household hunter who says: "Do not store jam or preserves on a high shelf." More than one good kid has been beamed by a jam-pot that juvenile fingers have dislodged from its lofty resting place.—Buffalo Express.

Dusty Traveler's Dry Bath.

Swim Not, Drown Not.

The Mohammedan and Hindu families in Kashmir for generations have taught their children that swimming is an ungentlemanly art. They argue that those who go often into the water run a risk of drowning.

Powerful Steam Engine.

The most powerful high-pressure steam engine in the world was built for the Cargo-Fleet Iron company of England and develops 25,000 horsepower at 140 revolutions a minute, with steam at 190 pounds.

Teaching a Fish.

According to Professor Thorndike a fish can learn to go to certain places, to take certain paths, to bite at certain things and refuse others, but that is about the measure of his ability.

Keeps Off Rust.

A few drops of linseed oil applied with a cloth to the outside of the gas stove or the inside of the oven will keep the stove from rusting and will make it easier to care for.

Famous Puritan Writer.

Sir Thomas Browne (1605-1682) was a physician and writer of the Puritan age, noted for the stateliness and rhythm of his style. His leading work is "Urn Burial."

To Cut Celluloid

Anyone who has tried to cut sheet celluloid knows that it is not as easy as it looks, says Popular Science Monthly. The best way is to make a deep scratch with a sharp scriber or the like, and part the celluloid by bending it sharply along the scratch. This trick is particularly useful when curved or irregular shapes must be cut.

Eagle Always Admired

From the most ancient times the eagle has been universally regarded as the emblem of might and courage. It was associated with Jupiter in Roman mythology and its figure on the standards of certain Roman legions has descended to the national ensigns of the United States, Germany and Russia. The eagle was adopted by the United States in 1783.

Fatalism

Fatalism is the belief that all events are always prearranged and determined by fate, implying either divine will or physical cause as the underlying force. In other words, a fatalist is disposed to accept every event in human life or in nature as preordained and controlled by fate, thus eliminating freedom of will.

The Sixth Sense

At a primary-school examination one of the questions was with regard to the five senses. A pupil wrote: "The five senses are sneezing, sobbing, crying, yawning, coughing. By the sixth sense is meant an extra one which some folks have. This is snoring."—Boston Transcript.

The Old Hundredth

The Psalm tune, the "Old Hundredth," first appeared in the Genevian psalter for the one hundred and thirty-fourth psalm. In England it was set to the one hundredth psalm. In the new version of 1696 it was called the "Old Hundredth."

Old Frames Made New

If picture or mirror frames become so damaged as to necessitate their being discarded, try gluing to the old frames ribbon or silk that harmonizes with the color scheme of the room. Brocaded metallic ribbon is the most effective.

Chamois for Windows

To make window cleaning easy, dip a piece of chamois in hot water, wring it, and go all over the pane with it, turning the chamois frequently. No rubbing with dusters is required, as the pane will dry with a beautiful polish.

Fate Selects the Worthy

Fate does not fling her great prizes to the idle, the indifferent, but to the determined, the enthusiastic, the man who is bound to win.—Exchange.

* SOCIAL CALENDAR *

Sunday, July 13, friends and relatives gathered at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dunkle for a real homecoming and a reunion of relatives and old neighbors and friends. Everyone came with well filled baskets and a real old-fashioned picnic dinner was served on the lawn and in the afternoon Mr. Dunkle treated the crowd to ice cream and cake. The day was spent in social chat and games among the youngsters. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Seesholt, Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Norman and daughter, Leithel, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hinton and son, Burien, and daughters, Evelyn and Bernice, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunkle and daughters, Edith and Helen, Mr. and Mrs. John Luckhart, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose, Mr. and Mrs. William Route, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hettinger, Mr. and Mrs. John Roll, Mr. and Mrs. Claud Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Olen Swebston and son, Lowell Edwin, Mr. and Mrs. Omer Hall and son, Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Roll, Mr. and Mrs. John Dunkle, Mr. and Mrs. John Kerns, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Will Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. H. WOMAN AUTHOR

Are Children a Drawback for an Ambitious Writer.

One of the questions which I am most often asked, says Isabel Eccles Mackay, is: "Do you find marriage and the possession of children a drawback to the writing of books?" One would almost be tempted to reply: "How can a woman write books without marriage and the possession of children?" Only that can hardly meet the case since so many women can—and do. At the same time it would seem that experiences which mean fulfillment of so much in woman can hardly be looked upon as handicaps in a profession which demands, above all things, understanding of life. If one were to revise the question and ask, "It writing of books a drawback to marriage and the possession of children?" my answer would be briefly "No." One does not write so many books perhaps, but, noting the length of publishers' lists, that can hardly be considered a drawback.

Naturally, where there are children, a woman has infinitely less time for any kind of professional work than a man. This fact she must frankly face if there is to be no confusion of values. But I believe it is equally true that every woman may discover a varying surplus of time which she may fairly appropriate for her own. The person who has never a moment to spare is likely to be a person terribly extravagant with minutes—throwing them away, even! Certainly when children are small it is difficult to reserve a definite place and definite hours for writing. Children are the least stable things in nature and hard and fast rules are impossible until they, too, are captive of regular hours of study. There can be no locked doors or attics with stuffed keyholes when any moment some terrible childish catastrophe may cause the universe to quake. The utmost that one can do at the stage is to explain that "a person has some writing to do" and to dilate feeling upon the advantages of quiet in the near vicinity. The audience will usually be sympathetic and full of promises. But one must not be surprised when a small knock comes to the door and a thrilling whisper demands permission to "just sit, quiet as anything and read." The intentions of the petitioner are so virtuous that to refuse seems churlish, so walking carefully on tiptoe, he (or she) comes softly in and sits down upon the little rocking chair which squeaks ("just like a weenty kitty, mother—don't you like it?") The "reading" book (known by heart) is opened and you return to your desk. But presently a small, far-away voice begins, "Once upon a time there were three little bunnies, Floppy, Mopsy—" "But, my dear, how can a person write while you are reading that lovely story?" A thoughtful pause, punctuated by squeaks, and then: "Can't you write while I'm turning the pages?" After all, when they are little, it comes, more or less, to that; one writes between the turning of the pages—any time—and presently the intervals grow longer.—From Everybody's Magazine for August in which a story by Mrs. Mackay appears.

CLAYTON H. EASTER

Died at Home in Yellowbud—Funeral Wednesday Afternoon.

Clayton Harvey Easter died at his home in Yellowbud Monday evening at 10 o'clock following an illness of sixteen days of neuralgia.

The deceased was born in Hillsboro, Highland county, Ohio, April 1858. He was the son of Enoch Harvey and Mary Beason Easter. He married Miss Catharine Griffey April 3, 1892. She with two sons and two daughters survive. The children are Clarence and Ray Easter, Mrs. Birdie Holloway and Mrs. Evelyn Bennett. Of her immediate family two brothers and four sisters are living.

The funeral services will be held at the Evangelical church, Yellowbud Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Rev. E. D. Paulin will officiate. Interment will be in Spring Bank cemetery.

Probe Double Drowning.

Akron, O., July 22.—Police are investigating the drowning of Vassilia Lucaian, 38, of Akron, and Ralph Paro, 30, of Barberton, in the old Ohio canal at Barberton, near here. A raft capsized when they were crossing the canal with four other men. The others were rescued.

Drop in Melon Prices.

Cleveland, July 22.—Eleven carloads of watermelons were sold at auction for from 3 to 20 cents each. They were 26-pound melons and 11 carloads means 10,000 melons. They were selling for 20 to 50 cents at retail compared with 75 cents to $1 last week.

Work, and Banish Worry

It is not work that kills men; it is worry. Work is healthful; you can scarcely put more upon a man than he can bear. Worry is rust upon the blade. It is not the revolution that destroys machinery, but the friction. Fear secretes acid; but love and trust are sweet juices.—Beecher.
